Nixon Takes Defiant Stand

College Trustees To Meet . . .

Raising Rates In Dorms Eyed

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The trustees of the four state colleges will consider raising dormitory rates at their April meeting at Wayne, according to Dr. Edwin Nelson, the board's executive secretary.

Nelson said higher food and labor costs are forcing consideration of higher dorm rates which were last increased two years ago. However, Nelson did not say how much of an increase will be considered.

State college students presently pay $400 per semester for 20 meals per week, depending on the particular campus.

Reasons Cited

Nelson said he did not expect the higher dorm rates would cause more students to move off campus and create a more serious occupancy probelm for the dorms than already exists.

Dorm occupancy rates are currently hovering in the 60%-70% range, Nelson said.

"The higher prices for fuel and food are effecting students off campus as well as those living in the dorms," he said. "I don't think higher dorm costs would cause a particular problem."

'Encouraging'

He described the current dorm picture at the colleges as "a little encouraging."

At the meeting the trustees will also debate whether a one-year-old moratorium on granting tenure to instructors should be lifted, modified or continued.

The colleges' presidents are expected to make a recommendation to the trustees.

Dr. Brendan MacDonald, president of Kearney State College, said as yet the presidents reached a common position on tenure and added, "We're not even close, to an agreement."

The Kearney State faculty senate has recommended that tenure be retained but that the probationary period be extended from four to six years before an instructor receives tenure.

Periodic Review

Another proposal would call for a periodic review of tenured instructors.

The practice of granting tenure, which is intended to allow instructors academic freedom and job security, was halted a year ago by the trustees when budget problems forced dismissal of some instructors.

MacDonald said currently 70% of Kearney State's faculty is tenured, compared to the mid-1960s when normally 40% of the instructors were tenured.

Nelson and MacDonald attributed the higher percentage of tenured faculty to decreased enrollments and a tighter job market for instructors.

MacDonald said nationally there appears to be strong interest in reviewing tenure policies.

He'll Fight Request For 42 More Tapes

. . . Ziegler Meets Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House indicated Tuesday President Nixon would resist on constitutional grounds a House Judiciary Committee request for 42 additional Watergate tape recordings.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon was not seeking a confrontation with the committee now conducting an impeachment investigation.

But during an hour-long news briefing, Ziegler said:

—That the President already was furnishing the committee with "massive amounts of materials" from White House files, namely the same tapes and documents turned over earlier to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski as well as other documents in non-Watergate fields.

—That the material Nixon already has agreed to provide "should be sufficient for them to conclude their inquiry and complete it quickly."

—That the committee requested the 42 additional tapes before it received and analyzed the material the President already had agreed to supply.

—That the committee is yet to define what constitutes an impeachable offense or say what specific allegations it is investigating within the context of such a definition.

—That it would be "constitutionally irresponsible" for Nixon to accede to any committee requests for White House tapes and documents until such a definition is made.

Ziegler would not, however, state flatly that the President would reject the committee's request for 42 tape recordings of conversations he held with some of his former key aides and Justice Department officials.

"It is too early to rule anything in or out," Ziegler said, adding that Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, was willing to continue his confidential contacts with committee counsel John Doar.

A Nixon rejection of the committee request, which was made in a letter dated Feb. 25, could bring a prompt congressional subpoena for the material.

Ziegler said Nixon was not seeking a confrontation, but several times in the briefing he referred to Nixon's constitutional responsibilities and contended that the committee's request ran counter to the doctrine of separation of powers.

Ziegler's comments came shortly after Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, the committee's senior Republican, said the White House had begun to deliver the tapes the committee was requesting.

Asked about this, Ziegler said Hutchinson apparently was referring to other materials the White House already has agreed to provide.

Ziegler contended that the committee was seeking "perusing rights through the files of the executive branch" and declared this "is something that simply cannot be tolerated under the Constitution."

In addition to the tapes and documents given to the special prosecutor, Ziegler said Nixon already had agreed and was in the process of supplying the committee with material on such diverse subjects as government antitrust cases, oil import quota actions and decisions by the Environmental Protection Agency, the Cost of Living Council, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Communications Commission.

His statement was the first disclosure that the committee's inquiry had branched into these non-Watergate fields.

House Judiciary Committee members were uncertain whether Ziegler was making the definition of charges a condition of cooperation.

Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., told newsmen the committee has no intention of preparing charges before it gathers all the evidence it thinks it needs.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., said if the White House intends to withhold the additional material the committee is seeking on such grounds, "it definitely signals a serious confrontation between Congress and the executive branch."

Rodino had kept details of the additional request secret under the committee's rules of confidentiality, and the White House leak of the letter of request angered many members.

Rodino and Hutchinson played down the idea that the committee and the White House were moving closer to confrontation.

County Backs YSS Group Home Plan

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Two group homes to house troubled teenagers operated by the Youth Service Systems (YES) gained first round approval from the County Board Tuesday.

The commissioners committed $15,000 to the program to match $150,000 proposed to come from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA).

YSS Director James Arnot pointed out that an application has to be submitted to the LEAA immediately for the federal money. He said he was notified just last week that the funds were available for an innovative program.

Under the plan, YSS would purchase two homes, one to house six teenage boys and one to house six teenage girls, with both homes located within the county.

The program would give authorities an alternative to placing youths 13-18 at the State Training Centers in Kearney and Geneva.

Presently, there are 30 to 40 teenagers placed in facilities outside Lancaster County, Bill Janike, chief probation officer reported.

The youths would be supervised by "house parents," who would receive training in supervising the groups.

Although noting that there are numerous other community based programs dealing with teenagers, Arnot said many of those agencies place restrictions on the youths and that resources are limited.

The proposed YSS program would help fill the gap, he maintained.

Funding for the second year would be on a 60% federal, 35% local and 5% state basis, while third year funding would be 30% federal, 65% local and 5% state.

In other business the board denied a request made by K. B. Krein for an easement to run a road through a subdivision one mile southwest of Rokeby. The proposed easement would run east of SW 27th, north of the SW 27th and W. Saltillo Rd. intersection.

Commissioners Jan Gauger and Kenneth Bourne voted to deny, while Commissioner Robert Colin abstained. Colin said he was not prepared to vote on the request since the board had just received the report on the application Tuesday.

Planning Director Doug Brogden recommended the no vote on the grounds that the easement would not meet the requirements of a public street and that a plat for the area should be considered first.

Brogden also maintained that if the easement were accepted, "there would be little chance of providing a coordinated road system in the county."

The board also unanimously approved the application of William Hawthorne for an amusement license to operate a golf driving range on W. Van Dorn.

In other business, the board:

— Accepted official bonds for Orlan Pape, clerk, and Jane Adkins, clerk.

— Accepted official bonds of assistant assessors.

— Approved contract with General Casualty Co. of Wisconsin for a policy covering Election Commissioner's Office.

—Approved temporary employment of Kevin Sullivan, graduate student in business administration, to work part-time on the county's insurance program, at $3 an hour.

Placed on file February reports from Register of Deeds, Surveyor and County Judge, the Veterans' Service Office quarterly report and projected highway user revenue distribution report from the Department of Roads.

— Agreed that sealed bids should be opened April 2, on county liability auto insurance.

Loophole Put In Loophole Phaseout

Washington (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee moved Tuesday toward a phaseout of the oil depletion allowance. But it tentatively voted to exempt price controlled oil — now 70% of the domestic market.

The 14-11 vote to allow continued application of the 22% depletion allowance to controlled oil was a major victory for the oil industry.

The amendment, proposed by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex., was approved over the objections of Committee Chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., who resumed the chairmanship Tuesday for the first time since he had back surgery last August.

"How can we justify applying it (the phaseout) to only 70% of oil?" Mills said in support of his losing effort.

Pending before the committee is a proposal by Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., to gradually phase out the depletion allowance over seven years, at a rate of 3% per year for five years and 2% per year for the last two years.

Gibbons supported the Archer amendment, even though it watered down his proposal, because he said he was in favor of eliminating all controls on oil and allowing the price of oil to be determined in the marketplace.

The committee, after meeting all day, adjourned before taking a vote on the Gibbons proposal, but it appeared almost certain to pass. Earlier in the day, the committee voted 17 to 7 against a motion by Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain, R-Mich., to leave the depletion allowance as is.

The 50-year-old depletion allowance is one of the most controversial of the thousands of "loopholes" in U.S. tax law. it allows an oil company to deduct for tax purposes 22% of the income from oil and gas properties.

The Archer amendment would have the effect of maintaining the depletion allowance on gas because all natural gas is controlled.

The tax-writing committee is considering a variety of measures designed to offset any excess profits that oil companies might reap from the energy shortage. It already tentatively decided to impose a temporary "windfall profits" tax on crude oil prices, allowing a portion of the tax to be poured back into research and development of new oil fields.

Some 70% of the oil now produced in this country is subject to price controls with a ceiling of $5.25 per barrel. This represents mainly "old oil" — the amount in production before the energy shortage hit.

The remaining newly discovered oil, or new production, is not controlled. Its price has hit $10 per barrel and more.

Senate Lines Drawn On Life, Death Issue

Washington (UPI) — Led by Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, liberal Senate Democrats Tuesday mounted an emotional fight against restoration of the death penalty.

"In the name of God, I ask my colleagues to join me in rejecting death, in affirming life, in rejecting vengeance, in affirming redemption," Hughes pleaded.

"There is no middle ground, no neutral zone," he added. "The choice is either life or death."

Hughes spoke as the Senate began considering a bill that provides the death penalty for treason, espionage and crimes where death occurs—including murder, political assassination, kidnaping, hijacking and others.

There have been no executions in the United States since 1967 and in 1972 the Supreme Court invited Congress to set firm guidelines under which the death penalty could be carried out.

In a classic liberal-conservative confrontation, Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., argued that "justice deserves no less" than restoration of the death penalty.

He said the "death penalty must be restored if our criminal justice system is to combat effectively the ever-increasing tide of violent crimes — crimes of terror — that threaten to engulf our nation and if the confidence of the American people in our system of justice is to be restored."

But Hughes asked, "Is the morbid trip back to the death penalty the right way to protect society from violence and keep faith with our moral purposes as a people? Is ultimate violence the antidote for violence?

"For me, the answer must be No. I cannot be brought to believe that the way to conquer crime in America is to revert to institutional killings in the name of justice."

Hughes, who plans to retire from the Senate in January to devote himself to religious work, was joined by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Vance Hartke, D-Ind., and a Republican, Jacob K. Javits, N.Y.

Kennedy said his slain brother, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., "would not have wanted his death to be the cause for taking another life." He said the death penalty "constitutes cruel and unusual punishment" and falls unfairly on the poor and minority groups.'

McClellan, emphasizing the seriousness of the crimes which would draw the death penalty, said, "People who commit crimes like these have forfeited their own right to life. I think it is the very minimum and not the maximum of what should be enacted."

Criminal Code Revision Sent To Floor

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A massive revision of Nebraska's criminal code was sent to the floor of the Legislature Tuesday for what the Judiciary Committee hopes will be speedy consideration and approval.

The bill, LB8, a 258-page proposal introduced in the 1973 Unicameral, has been subjected to scores of amendments.

Among them was a proposal to delay its operative date until Jan. 1, 1976, giving the 1975 Legislature an opportunity to make further refinements and officials of the judicial branch time to study the law.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, who authored an alternative plan which has been largely scuttled by the committee, objected to the revised bill.

It apparently would not make substantial changes in "sex laws which are so goldarned obsolete that they're pathetic," DeCamp said, and it apparently ignores the relatively new area of corporate crimes.

DeCamp said changes in laws dealing with insanity are also needed.

Those areas were covered in his bill, he said.

DeCamp is concerned about victimless sex crime laws which he believes are in need of change.

LB8 moved to the floor on a 6-1 vote, with DeCamp dissenting.

Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha said the bill may need to be enacted during the closing three weeks of the current session if it is to be approved at all.

"The complexion of the Legislature this year is more favorable for reform than it is apt to be next year," he said.

But, Fellman said, he is fearful that revision of the code may have been "piecemeal," with some needed changes ignored.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln suggested that victimless crimes could become the subject for a committee study leading to possible revisions in 1975.

Clearing its docket, the committee advanced six other bills and killed five measures.

LB1040, a corrections reform bill, won committee approval along with LB700, a measure to control the use of criminal records.

Also advanced was LB574, Gov. J. James Exon's 1973 bill to increase the penalties for assaults on law enforcement officials.

New York Times News Summary

Wilson To Renegotiate Membership In Euromart

(c) New York Times News Service

London — Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain announced to Parliament that he intended to renegotiate the terms of Britain's Common Market membership and to submit the results to a popular vote. This was the strongest note in what otherwise was a carefully modulated Labor government program submitted to a Parliament which had the power — but clearly lacked the intention — at this stage — to defeat the new prime minister. (More on Page 9.)

Perez Bids For Leadership Role

Caracas — Venezuela's new president, Carlos Andres Perez, offered Tuesday in his inaugural address to use his country's vast oil wealth to help achieve the economic liberation of Latin America. The speech was a clear bid by the dynamic new chief of state for a role of leadership in South America. (More on Page 3.)

Pompidou Arrives For Moscow Talks

Moscow — President Pompidou of France arrived in Moscow for two days of talks with Soviet Communist Party Leader Brezhnev. The visit marks an upswing in Soviet-French relations.

Nixon Refuses To Be 'Irresponsible'

Washington — The White House indicated that President Nixon was unwilling to provide 42 additional Watergate-related recordings requested by the committee. Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, said it would be "unconstitutionally irresponsible," for Nixon to give the committee all that it is seeking. (More on Page 1.)

Hush Money Said Paid Last March 21

Washington — The Watergate grand jury concluded that a disputed hush money payment to the lawyer for E. Howard Hunt Jr. was made on the evening of last March 21, less than 12 hours after a White House meeting involving President Nixon, sources close to the investigation said. Specific testimony, the sources said, fixing the date and time of payment — which has been challenged by the White House — was provided to the grand jury by Frederick C. Larue, a former Republican Re-election Committee official who served as go-between in hush money payments.

Sears: Fixing Case Never Asked

New York — Harry L. Sears, a government witness testified under cross examination in federal district court in New York that "never at any time" did he ask John N. Mitchell to "fix" a case for Robert L. Vesco, the financier who is now a fugitive. It was Sear's sixth day on the witness stand.

'Office Of Presidency' Defended

Washington — James D. St. Clair, the President's lawyer, says he represents "the office of the presidency" not the occupant of that office "individually." In drawing that line he neatly complements the President's defense in a series of legal moves growing out of Watergate. Nixon, in refusing for months to turn over the Watergate tapes to the special prosecutor, and refusing now to give certain material to the impeachment inquiry, has explained that he is acting to protect the presidency, not himself.

Panel Votes To Cut Oil Allowance

Washington — The House Ways and Means Committee voted to do something about reducing the depletion allowance that producers of oil and natural gas use to reduce their income taxes, but it appeared to be far away from being able to decide exactly how or how much to cut the allowance. But after long discussion, the committee voted 14 to 11 to reduce the allowance gradually on oil that is not under price control. (More on Page 1.)

Mills Doesn't Know Of Fraud

. . . 'I Said Specifically I Wasn't Accusing' Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills contended Tuesday that congressional findings on President Nixon's taxes will do more to force his resignation than Watergate "simply because people understand taxes."

Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said, "I have no idea" if tax fraud might be involved. "I said specifically I was not accusing the President."

At a news conference last Friday in Little Rock, Ark., Mills said he expects Nixon to resign, primarily because of a report being prepared by the House-Senate Internal Revenue Taxation Committee, of which he is vice chairman.

Mills told newsmen Tuesday he does not know if the President had personal detailed knowledge of controversial deductions such as the $482,000 deduction for his vice presidential papers.

The Arkansas Democrat refused to comment on White House statements that he is taking cheap shots at the President and that if he has any evidence for his allegations he should "put up or shut up."

Mills repeated that the committee report, to be issued in 30 to 40 days, will do more to force the President's resignation than Watergate.

Mills said later in an interview: "What I said was that the tax issue could hurt the President more than Watergate — simply because people understand taxes.

"If the figures that have been talked about — $250,000 or $300,000 owed — are correct, people certainly will be asking questions," Mills said.

Asked again about the possibility of tax fraud findings, he said as far as he is concerned the House-Senate report will draw no conclusions at all.

"We will simply lay out the facts and let people draw their own conclusions," he said.

Mills suggested that much of what will be in the report already has been publicly disclosed.

"You fellows have already written about this . . . ," he said "— What developed in California about the residence and the accountant not being able to see him. But everything has not been printed."

He said the memorandum surfacing Monday reporting that Nixon wanted to see past presidents' tax returns to look at their deductions is not one of the new disclosures that he believes will hurt the President.

Presidential counselor Bryce Harlow, talking to newsmen aboard the President's jet from Florida Monday night, compared Mills' tactics to those used in the McCarthy era.

Harlow said the press was upset at guilt by innuendo 20 years ago and that he could not understand why it is not upset by Mills' allegations.

Mills replied only that he still considers Harlow a friend.

Loan Said Made To Brother

WASHINGTON (AP) — Columnist Jack Anderson said Tuesday that President Nixon's brother Donald got a $100,000 personal loan from a California builder in 1971 at a time when the builder was seeking a federal contract.

Anderson said it was the second major loan Donald Nixon obtained from government contractors. He noted that in 1956 he got a $205,000 loan from billionaire Howard Hughes, then a defense contractor.

The 1971 loan came in the form of a $100,000 check, dated Aug. 4, from Lloyd Hallamore, then president of Hallamore Homes Inc., Anderson wrote in his column. He said Securities and Exchange Commission records show that in July 1971, Donald Nixon became a director of San-Bar Electronics Corp., "a closely affiliated Hallamore firm."

Neither Hallamore nor Donald Nixon could be reached for comment immediately.

Anderson said his afsociate, George Clifford, "infiltrated a Hallamore meeting in July 1971 and heard Donald Nixon boast of his efforts to get contracts to build Hallamore homes."

He said the firm later got a subcontract for more than $4 million to build homes at 18 Air Force bases. He said Harold Anderson, the president of the company and Hallamore's son-in-law, denied that Donald Nixon had anything to do with the contract.

Harold Anderson said the loan had been made — and repaid. He was quoted by the columnist as saying, "The loan had absolutely nothing to do with the operation of Hallamore Inc."

Ford Says Nixon's Defiance Might Catalyze Impeachment

(c) Washington Star-News

World News

Washington — Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday that White House defiance of a subpoena from the House Judiciary Committee "might be a catalyst" that could lead to impeachment of President Nixon by the House.

"We are dealing with practicalities here as well as the fine, legal definition of impeachment," Ford said.

In the case of a House member "who hasn't quite made up his mind," Ford said, "a totally adamant attitude, which I don't think exists now, could be just one of those catalysts."

Asked if he considered refusal to honor a subpoena an impeachable offense itself, Ford replied: "I'm not sure . . . but it certainly adds fuel to the fire."

At a breakfast meeting with some 30 reporters, the vice president said he believes the request for material by the House Judiciary Committee now pending "goes far beyond any act relevant to any language in the Constitution" on grounds for impeachment.

The White House confirmed Tuesday that Judiciary Committee counsel John Doar had requested 42 tape recordings of White House conversations covering six subject areas instead of only six tapes as had earlier been assumed. The request was contained in a letter sent Feb. 25 from John Doar, Judiciary Committee counsel, to James St. Clair, Nixon's attorney.

Ford said he had read the correspondence and was not yet convinced that the House request is justified.

But, he added, the legal implications of refusing the material "could become a very serious matter."

"If they just lock the doors of the White House, that becomes extremely serious," he said, "but I don't think they're going to do that."

The crucial criterion, he said, is whether the committee's request "is reasonable or not."

Ford said he believes Nixon has a right to make a judgment on the validity of requests for information from the committee. "A person charged with a crime . . . ought to know the reason why certain evidence is required," Ford said.

The vice president also indicated that he may re-examine his decision not to listen to or read transcripts of tape recordings of critical White House meetings on the Watergate scandal because of the new controversy over Nixon's statement last week that he was told last March 21 that hush money had been paid to those involved in the burglary.

Asked if he was concerned about the apparent conflict with previous presidential statements on that point, Ford replied: "I think anybody would be concerned."

He said he still did not believe he should hear the tapes because of his position as vice president but added "I want to refresh my memory on what he said and what the other evidence might be." And, he added, this might mean that he would decide to hear the tapes after all.

Ford suggested that Nixon still retains broad support among Republicans he is meeting in his barnstorming around the country.

"An awful lot of people come up to me privately or just casually and are very supportive of the President," he said. "I don't know how you count them up but it's amazing how many do."

And Ford repeated his prediction that Nixon will survive the investigations. "I still don't believe . . . there will be a favorable vote for impeachment in the House of Representatives," he said.

Man Dies In Flood In Tulsa

By The Associated Press

Flood waters took one life in Tulsa Tuesday as swollen Bird Creek moved downstream to Owasso, northeast of Tulsa.

Robert M. Steele, 54, Claremore, was drowned when his car was swept off a north Tulsa street into a ditch several feet deep.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol reported witnesses said Steele had stopped his car on the street which was then under water. The swift moving current then swept the vehicle off the street into the ditch. His body and the car were recovered after a diver went into the water to hook the car onto a wrecker.

Arab Oil Men Remain Split

By United Press International

Nine Arab countries sent their oil ministers to Libya Tuesday to review the Arab oil embargo against the United States. They were still divided on whether to ease or maintain the boycott, imposed during last October's Middle East war to aid the Arab cause on a worldwide scale.

Libya, which will be host to the conference opening Wednesday in Tripoli, and Algeria, current chairman of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) which is the official sponsor of the embargo, still regard the United States as anti-Arab and are opposed to any relaxation.

Egypt, however, is reported to have persuaded Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states — the source of almost all U.S. imports of crude oil from the Arab world — to vote in favor of easing the embargo.

Egyptain President Anwar Sadat feels the Middle East peace initiatives of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger are sufficient evidence of a growing neutrality in U.S. policy.

The Soviet Union Tuesday urged Arab nations in an Arabic language broadcast from Moscow to the Middle East to resist "American pressure" and maintain the embargo.

The broadcast underscored the hardening Soviet Middle East policy and showed the Kremlin's displeasure with the successes of the Kissinger diplomacy.

Diplomatic sources in Cairo said Tuesday Sadat rejected a proposal by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to decide the issue in a face-to-face meeting. The sources said Khadafy, in an urgent message to Sadat Sunday night, suggested that the two meet at Tobruk, Libya, or any other place.

Khadafy's aim was to stave off a decision to ease the embargo. Sadat's reaction was "negative," but the sources said they didn't know whether the Egyptian formally turned it down.

Khadafy's message arrived a few hours after six Arab oil ministers gathered in Cairo Sunday, dropped a plan to hold the conference there and shifted it to Tripoli as originally scheduled.

The sources said Khadafy's message was the second to Sadat on the embargo.

In his earlier message, they said, Khadafy strongly opposed any relaxation of the embargo and said he would not like to see such a decision taken in his capital — Tripoli.

Gas Dealers Recommend Fill-Ups Instead Of Limits

Washington (UPI) — Spokesmen for motorists and service station operators urged Tuesday that drivers be permitted to "fill 'er up" at the gasoline pumps to discourage long waiting lines.

In testimony before a joint House-Senate Economic Committee panel headed by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., officials of the American Automobile Association and the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers opposed any further restrictions on maximum gasoline purchases.

While the AAA reported that gasoline supplies nationwide have improved "significantly" in the past week, Charles Binsted, executive director of the Petroleum Dealers, said staggered station hours and minimum purchase requirements had helped.

Federal Energy Director William E. Simon's request to limit sales to 10 gallons per customer also had helped temporarily, Binsted said, but eventually forced waiting lines to lengthen.

"Therefore, we now recommend a fill-up instead of a limit," he said. "We do endorse the requirement for a minimum sale to prevent top-offs of gas tanks."

John Delorenzi, managing director of the AAA's Public Policy Division, said: "If a motorist coming in with less than half a tank is allowed to fill up, he will not be back in line several days later as occurs when he is restricted to a maximum-purchase of $2 to $4."

Delorenzi also urged that state or local authorities assure that "gas is available somewhere through the day," including Sundays, and that out-of-state motorists not be required to obey local gasoline sale restrictions.

Humphrey said that despite "relatively normal conditions" in March under revised federal allocation of supplies, coupon rationing might still become necessary if serious shortages recur.

Israeli Helicopter Downed By Syria

By The Associated Press

Syrian forces shot down an Israeli helicopter Tuesday during an artillery and tank battle which raged for 3½ hours in the central and northern sectors of the Golan Heights, a Syrian military spokesman announced.

Earlier, Premier Golda Meir of Israel interrupted a speech on peace prospects with Syria with the announcement: "I have just received a note telling me that shelling has been coming from Syrian bases onto our bases."

There was no immediate word on casualties from either side.

The spokesman said Syrian heavy artillery scored direct hits on eight Israeli concentrations and destroyed two engineering units, an ammunition dump, an antitank rocket base and six artillery batteries.

The heavy exchange shook the ground in Damascus.

It was the first flare-up on the tense Israeli-Syrian border since Saturday.

In Geneva, Egypt notified the International Committee of the Red Cross that it is willing to accept a three-month-old Red Cross proposal for the establishment of joint commissions to investigate charges of atrocities in the Middle East.

More than 20 official complaints have been filed by Egypt, Syria and Israel with the Swiss-based Red Cross committee during and after the October Middle East war.

The Red Cross committee proposed last Dec. 12 that tripartite commissions of inquiry be set up, composed of one neutral member and one representative of each of the parties directly concerned.

Venezuela Plans Oil Nationalization

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — With Pat Nixon watching from the presidential box, Carlos Andres Perez was sworn in Tuesday as Venezuela's 39th president. He said he would speed up the nationalization of the country's huge foreign-run petroleum industry during his five-year term.

Perez offered Venezuelan support — "backed by oil" — in aiding Latin-American efforts to achieve "independent development, fair prices for raw materials and just and economically balanced participation in world trade.

"We are going to realize our country's old aspiration that its petroleum be Venezuelan," Perez added.

His inaugural address was delivered to a joint session of Congress and delegates from more than 70 foreign countries.

Mrs. Nixon, representing her husband, arrived at the 19th century legislative palace in an eight-car motorcade. She was first seated with fellow United States delegates Robert McClintock, American ambassador to Venezuela, and Miami businessman Nicholas H. Morley. Just before the ceremonies began, she was invited to join the wives of the incoming and outgoing presidents in the presidential box.

In his speech, Perez said that "different legal dispositions exist which guarantee the reversion" of the 3.3 million barrel-a-day oil industry. "But today we see the convenience of stepping up the process to establish once and for all a new national and nationalistic petroleum policy."

He did not outline how or when nationalization would take place and emphasized that the process must be discussed. "No dogmatism will blind the petroleum policy of the government which I am beginning today," he promised.

The 51-year-old leader replaces outgoing Social Christian President Rafael Caldera, 56.

Perez, a former interior minister, who was elected by more than 500,000 voter last December, was presented with the yellow, blue and red presidential sash by Caldera and was officially sworn in by Senate President Gonzalo Barrios.

His election signaled the return to power of the center-left Democratic Action party, which also won a solid majority in both the nation's 200-seat House of Deputies and 49-seat Senate.

$75.6 Million Offered For Oil Shale Tract

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An apparent high bid of $75.6 million was offered Tuesday for a tract of oil shale land that contains an estimated 244 million barrels of recoverable crude oil.

The bid was submitted by Phillips and Sun Oil for a 5,120-acre tract in eastern Utah, the third tract of federal land opened for oil shale development.

The bid was three times the next highest offer and nearly 20 times higher than the only other offer.

It was, however, far below the $210.3 million and $117.8 million that the government has accepted for similar-size tracts in Colorado.

Paul Howard, director of the federal government's Bureau of Land Management office for Utah, said no bids will be accepted at this time. He said the government reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids on the land.

The second high bid was for $25 million from Occidental Oil Shale Inc., and the third for $3.8 million from Geo Kinetics Group, which is made up of five companies.

Phillips and Sun said say they plan to use the room and pillar process to mine the Utah shale. The process extracts shale from underground by creating a room supported by pillars of rock.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

On this page this morning, another Waverly resident discusses some aspects of that community's rapid growth of the past few years. That growth was the subject of a recent six-part series in The Star, a series which apparently provoked considerable interest within Waverly.

One gathers from all that has been written of late about this matter that Waverly is a fairly typical community with a wide variety of opinions among the people who live there. There are those who seem to want no change at all and resent the influx of new people.

There are those who have nothing against the influx but basically cling to the past. There are both old and new residents who want change. There are some who think the town has done very well to date and some who think things could be done a lot better.

If that doesn't make Waverly typical, then we don't know what would. Never mentioned in the series was the problem the community creates for Lincoln. People who work in Lincoln but live in Waverly are a tax liability for Lincoln and a tax asset for Waverly.

Suburban growth beyond the city limits has been a problem that has plagued many cities in the country. We mention this only as a possible source of consolation for the people of Waverly so they know they are not the only ones with problems.

And it is true that the growth of that community has presented problems and will continue to do so. It is obvious that Waverly offers some people an environment they like and cannot find in Lincoln and probably at a lower overall price.

That does mean that the community will face problems in supplying the public programs that will come to be wanted. This includes streets, various utilities, parks, recreation programs, law-enforcement, libraries and other desirable attractions.

In this you have the classic dilemma that the planners and economists have never really been able to answer with certainty. The dilemma is whether growth is good or bad, from both an economic and sociological point of view.

But the weight of opinion and feeling has fallen on the side of growth for the sake of expanded opportunity. Growth means jobs and jobs mean more and better income. For those who share in those jobs and income, growth is an attractive thing.

For those who stay about the same in terms of their own personal income and position, growth is probably not so attractive. For them, higher costs of living are a liability they seem unable to overcome.

What appears to be the only certainty for Waverly is that it will continue to grow. In the final analysis, this has to be an acceptable proposition because it stems from the freedom of people to live and work wherever they please.

So long as people have this freedom, they will exercise it in ways that often lead to some controversy and conflict. The people who move to Waverly are logically going to have an interest in the area and will be inclined to express that interest.

This, too, is for the best in the long-run. Waverly would be worse off than it is if it were home to countless families who cared nothing at all for the community.

Growing pains are sometimes unpleasant but they offer Waverly more a point of pride than displeasure. They offer a challenge, too, but that's what life is all about.

"I will continue to cooperate completely in providing any unshredded, unlost and unerased evidence I am absolutely forced to give up"

Europe The Bigger Problem

President Nixon has received his highest marks from the public for his endeavors on the international scene — the end of active U.S. participation in the Vietnam War, detente with the Soviet Union and the warming of relations with the Peoples Republic of China.

All is not well on those far-flung fronts. Peace is not at hand in Vietnam and the U.S. continues to encourage the hostilities through military aid; relations with China have cooled appreciably as a power struggle in Peking runs its course and detente has been mostly a one-sided affair in favor of the Soviet Union. But in the main, the United States is better off with respect to those problems than it was before the President's initiatives.

Today another problem plagues the United States on the international scene: this nation is losing ground with its friends.

In a State Department briefing Monday Sec. of State Henry Kissinger observed that "the biggest problem American foreign policy confronts right now is not to regulate competition with its enemies — we have a generation of experience with that and with ups and downs we are going to handle it — but how to bring our friends to a realization that there are greater common interests than simply self-assertiveness and that the seeming victory they are striving for is going to prove hollow in an atmosphere of constant strife and endless competition."

The states of Western Europe are being encouraged by France to repudiate any policy or concept which xenophobic Europeans would imagine having an American stamp on it. Although a strategy might make sense — such as allied cooperation in the face of the world-wide energy shortage or economic cooperation in the world market place — the European attitude is to go it alone rather than give the appearances of knuckling under to U.S. domination. And while western Europe is inclined to shut off American influence from the continent, the allies continue to demand that the U.S. military shield guarantee their security by keeping troops and dependents abroad.

As Kissinger asserts, the U.S. is more capable than any other nation of solving the oil crisis or of winning any other economic competition because of its resources, but that will benefit neither the U.S. or its western allies.

The largely cosmetic advances on the diplomatic front taken earlier this decade may be nothing compared to the serious challenge of renewing a working relationship with nations we have worked with before. At least the Nixon-Kissinger team knew the enemy. It will be harder dealing with friends.

A Hotheaded Response

The Buffalo County sheriff has defended the action of a deputy who last Friday fired several warning shots over a car which carried escaping streakers. "It wasn't the streaking that prompted the deputy to fire. It was the fleeing to avoid arrest," the sheriff said.

But it was the streaking which prompted the fleeing which prompted the shooting, and any way you cut it, it was over-reaction on the part of the deputy.

This is something we hoped wouldn't happen when Nebraska caught up with the streaking fad last weekend. For the most part, authorities handled the phenomenon pretty well. In Lincoln, there were a few arrests, but officers for the most part patiently tried to contain the crowds of spectators while looking the other way as far as the streakers were concerned. Things didn't get out of hand.

Nobody was injured in the Buffalo County incident; but they could have been. Any time someone draws and fires a gun the chance is good that someone will be hurt. As obnoxious as streaking may be to people, few really believe that injury or death is an appropriate penalty.

Hopefully this will be the last hotheaded response to streaking.

My ancestors came to the Waverly community more than 100 years ago and have lived here since that time, so I feel that I am one of the lifelong residents of the town of Waverly. I have seen the town grow from a 250-population to the 1,600 that are here today. I am one of the individuals who feel as if maybe we were better off before we had this growth that we are experiencing at the present time. When we were a small community, we had a small but very good school. We had two good grocery stores in town. Everyone was a friend with everyone else and we did not have all the problems that come with a growing town. Maybe we did not have a lot of the material things that are required of a town today, but I feel we had a lot more peace of mind and friendliness than we are experiencing today. We had a good church town and I think most people were satisfied and content with the town.

As more people started moving to town, it meant larger utility systems, larger schools, more pavement and many more items coming up that we are in need of. But to the person who was content with what we had, about all it means is more people and higher taxes.

I did not realize until reading the articles in The Star newspaper that there were so many things wrong with Waverly as a place for a home. I don't know why we need more law-enforcement so badly. We have a county sheriff who lives here and his main area of jurisdiction is in Waverly. I think he has done a good job in town of slowing down the dragsters and this type of thing, but we have no problem with crime in town. More lawmen in town would not do enough good to justify the cost of having them here. I might add that if there is a crime problem in Waverly, it's on the north side of town. I live on the south side of town and know of no problem areas here.

There were some comments made in the press that I would take exception to. First, the Jaycees were the first organization in town with any push. Does Mrs. Carlson know the many hours the school action group spent, or the amount of money donated by the Commercial Club, businessmen and the local citizens to get the bond issue passed, after the third attempt, to make it possible for her children to have a place to learn?

How about the time spent by members of the fire department to build the fire department we have in our town? Does she think the two churches were built without a much pushing from different groups of people? The Jaycees were not there.

Secondly, the various comments that the village council was dragging its feet. This is a very unjust accusation. First, one must realize that this is a group of men who have their own personal businesses and jobs, but they take time from their busy world to attend and plan these meetings which are long and many. Mayor Marolf should be commended for his part in this operation for approximately 20 years. He is a farmer, living in town, but he will at any time regardless of work to be done or time of year let his work go to take care of any town business that may arise.

We must realize that many of the projects mentioned are funded through federal funds. Anyone who has ever had any dealing with the federal government would know that it moves slowly. Therefore, it means a wait until the time funds are available.

Third, the issue of liquor in Waverly. I feel that blaming the churches for the lack of liquor in town is most unfair. There has not been any beer or liquor in town for many years. We have always had a good clean town without it and can see no advantage in getting liquor here. It was stated that most everyone secretly wants booze in town. The people had a chance to vote it in but it was turned down. We vote by secret ballot here.

It was mentioned that the Jaycees were the only ones to get things done in Waverly. It was not mentioned that some years past, the volunteer fire department donated $1,200, I believe it was, to light the football field at the school. They didn't mention that out of the $2,000 the group has in grants for the community center, $1,500 was given by the Commercial Club. They did not tell that the Commercial Club sponsors the summer athletic activities for the youth in this area, that they sponsor the activities banquet in the school and until two years ago, they solely financed and organized the youth fair.

I would like to ask the Jaycees to report on their activities for the town. They did put up Christmas decorations but only after they canvassed the businessmen, who are mostly all Commercial Club members, for donations.

Mrs. Carlson stated that the shopping center has a tendency to blight the downtown area. This "blighted" area in the last two years has produced a new bank, new post office, new garage, new plumbing shop, and a new electric and appliance store. Presently there is under construction a new dental office. Also, the two buildings that were vacated by the grocery stores are now a variety store recently opened and a furnace shop opening soon.

It was also mentioned that electricity, gas and water were higher priced in Waverly than in Lincoln. This is not quite true. Water is cheaper, electricity rates the same, and gas is higher.

☆ ☆ ☆

As to the referral to Waverly as a bedroom community for Lincoln, this may be true but it does not need to be. If the majority of the so-called incomers would do what trading they could in Waverly, the businessmen could provide more services. A large percentage of the newcomers spend only a small portion of their money in Waverly. No matter what they are looking for, they buy only the mere necessities. With a large purchase, they don't even take the time to contact the local merchant to see what he could possibly do for them. The more business done locally, the more service could be provided.

These are some of the unjust criticisms that were printed, but I am sure others will have comments on other facets of these articles.

My last remark is that the road the dissatisfied people come in on has two sides. One is leading in and the other, leading out. I doubt that this side is crowded.

No Strike Threat

Lincoln, Neb.

The Star's editorial support of efforts by UN-L Ag. College faculty to achieve salary equity is appreciated. The editorial in The Star of March 7 was generally accurate in regard to the resolution adopted unanimously by the Ag. faculty on March 5 to present their concerns clearly and concisely to university administrators, the governor, the Legislature and the public.

However, one statement in the editorial needs to be corrected since it could lead to possible misunderstanding, emotionalism and unnecessary controversy. The last paragraph implies that the Ag. faculty might be willing to strike for three months each year if additional funds are not forthcoming for salary equity on a 12-month employment basis. This was not the intent of the third alternative contained in the resolution, namely, to be paid equitable salaries for nine months, at least. No strike threat is emplied. There is not now nor has there ever been any sympathy among Ag. faculty for such a counter-productive approach to this problem. We believe it can be resolved through established governmental procedures.

Our position on the salary equity issue is that:

(1) We prefer the traditional and fundamentally sound 12-month basis of operating the College of Agricutlure;

(2) We recommend and prefer direct appropriation by the Legislature of sufficient funds to provide full salary equity;

(3) If direct appropriation is not forthcoming, university contingency funds should be used to provide full salary equity;

(4) If no increased funds are made available for equity adjustment in Ag. faculty salaries, we would be willing to realize full equity for nine months by taking present inequitable 12-month salaries for nine-month appointments which would use nearly all present and proposed funds budgeted for faculty salaries in the Ag. College.

This last approach would mean that some research and extension programs would have to be curtailed — not because of our unwillingness to work, but, rather, because there would not be sufficient funds to pay for the additional work time involved in year-around operations. Simply stated, the Ag. faculty considers it unreasonable that they should be expected to work an additional three months for nearly nothing.

We hope this will provide a clearer understanding of the issue and correct any possible interpretation of our recent group action as an implied strike threat.

Quality Of Reporting

Falls City, Neb.

In reply to "Tired of Corruption," I don't believe I condoned criminality in my letter. As usual, these unsigned letters always slide off the point. Additionally, I suggest that the year 1948 seems by most reasonable men's methods of measurements of time to have superseded 1972 by a few moons.

Even Jack Anderson, writing in the Washington Post, has admitted his revelation of a highly placed agent in the cabinet of Madam Gandhi's government led to the termination of said agent's life and should not have been revealed.

With irresponsible reporting in the Washington Post from stolen U.S. government documents, I think "Tired of Corruption" should ask himself if he wants government by Jack Anderson who is not elected and is not held accountable for his actions (someone who cannot be touched because of the First Amendment).

Maybe if we had more reporters who refused to fence stolen U.S. documents and publish them for the almighty buck regardless of the detrimental effects the action has on U.S. interest, there might not be a need for a group of "plumbers" assigned to locate such leaks. Perhaps if there had been no leaks jeopardizing U.S. agents' lives and our national security (in this case, the battle with the Russians over control of Arab oil), there would never have been need for Watergate.

Where was "Tired of Corruption" when Bobby Kennedy had HIS group of "plumbers"?

Black Marketeers Upping Oil's Price

WASHINGTON — We have uncovered evidence that unscrupulous brokers are selling oil on the black market for staggering profits. This is added to the soaring prices that the consumers must pay as they shiver in underheated homes and wait in long gas lines.

Our investigation has taken us from the backrooms of Washington to the oil-rich sheikhdoms of the Middle East. We found plenty of oil available, but the distribution has been thrown out of whack by bumbling bureaucrats and greedy middlemen.

In Saudi Arabia, we were told that the Arabs are pumping more oil than came out of the Middle East a year ago. At the American Petroleum Institute, we learned that gasoline in U.S. storage tanks exceeds the level last year at this time.

Why, then, do motorists have to line up for gas and pay ecorbitant prices?

Inside sources tell us that the oilmen are keeping their storage tanks full — some say as a hedge against future shortages, others say as a holdout for higher prices.

The federal allocation program has also been badly mismanaged. The federal energy wizards failed to determine, on a regional basis, the extent of gas scarcity and the availability of supply.

The gas was allocated, therefore, using fragmented and sometimes inaccurate information.

The Federal Energy Office also used 1972 as the base period for calculating the allocations. But the population growth and the travel patterns have changed. A large number of gas stations, particularly in low-income neighborhoods, have also closed. None of these factors was taken into account.

The fast-buck boys, meanwhile, have taken advantage of the oil panic to buy bootleg oil abroad and resell it at a premium to American wholesalers. They do business by telephone and Telex, demanding cash in the bank before they will complete a deal.

Some oil vultures operate outside the law, bribing government officials in the oil-producing countries. Most black-market oil comes from Indonesia, Libya, Nigeria, Rumania and Venezuela — less from the Persian Gulf states.

For a supertanker full of crude, a broker can clear up to $5 million above the market price. Smaller tankers yield around $1 million for the middlemen.

A large volume of black-market petroleum is processed in Italian refineries. The probable reason, say our sources, is that Italy has surplus refining capacity. But this has led to whispers, which our sources cannot verify, that the Mafia has moved into the oil brokerage business.

Despite plentiful petroleum, meanwhile, many Americans are forced to pay bootleg prices for their gasoline.

Footnote: An American Petroleum Institute spokesman denied that oil companies are hoarding stocks. Industry sources admitted, however, that some gasoline is held back because it is difficult to obtain.

Yet the major oil companies have refused to purchase available crude oil on the world market, claiming government regulations make it unprofitable. Our sources suggest that the oil companies also fear a flood of foreign oil would drive gasoline prices down.

ANTHONY LEWIS

The Closing Circle

BOSTON — Imagine that we had as president a person of ordinary sensitivity to right and wrong. One day he is told by his Special Counsel some news of which he has had no inkling before: His own aides have for months been covering up a crime and paying hush money to the convicted criminals.

Would he sit there and calmly discuss what could practically be done to assure continued silence from the criminals? Would he "examine all the options at great length?" Would he then wait 40 days to obtain any assistant's resignation and make a public explanation?

Or would this mythical president react with shock and outrage? Would he pick up the telephone at once and call the Justice Department or the F.B.I. — those who he well knew had been investigating this very crime? Would he inform the judge who was about to sentence the convicted men?

It is considerations of that kind — of common sense and basic respect for law — that makes so amazing President Nixon's explanation of his famous talk with John W. Dean 3d on March 21, 1973.

The President's purpose in telling the story was plain enough; indeed, it may well have been the reason for having a news conference so soon after the last. It was to explain away as best he could the tape of the March 21 meeting, which his counsel, James St. Clair, had persuaded him he could no longer hope to withhold from the impeachment inquiry.

The explanation he gave was that on March 21 he needed a study made on how to "get the whole story out." He therefore asked two of the very aides said to be involved in the cover-up, Dean and John D. Ehrlichman, to write reports!

The known facts about what happened after that meeting on the morning of March 21 indicate that the President's purpose was not disclosure but continued cover-up. These are some of the events that followed:

March 21. That evening Frederick C. LaRue of the Committee to Re-elect the President arranged to have $75,000 delivered to E. Howard Hunt Jr., a Watergate defendant who had been demanding money and was about to be sentenced.

March 22. The President met with Ehrlichman, H. R. Haldeman, Dean and John N. Mitchell. He talked about how to deal with the Senate Watergate Committee, making no reference to Dean's disclosures of the day before. In the middle of the meeting, Nixon telephoned Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, who at that point knew nothing about the cover-up, and talked to him about the Senate committee without saying a word about Dean's shocking revelations.

March 22. That night John J. Caulfield, former White House aide, telephoned James W. McCord Jr., one of the men convicted in the break-in, and said $100,000 would be available for bail money if he needed it after sentencing the next day.

April 14. Dean and Jeb Stuart Magruder began talking to the Watergate prosecutors, implicating among others Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell.

April 15. After a White House prayer breakfast, Kleindienst and the head of his criminal division, Henry Petersen, informed the President of the Dean and Magruder interviews.

April 17. Nixon announced, without being specific, that there had been "major developments" on Watergate. He said that no present or former official of importance "should be given immunity from prosecution" — a policy likely to discourage Dean from talking.

April 18. Petersen told Nixon that he had heard about the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. The President ordered him to "stay out of that" on "national security" grounds.

April 25. Petersen threatened to resign unless he could tell the judge in the Ellsberg trial about the burglary. Nixon gave way and said he could.

April 30. On television, Nixon announced the resignations of Haldeman, Ehrlichman ("two of the finest public servants it has been my privilege to know") and Dean. He said that on March 21 he had "personally ordered those conducting the investigations to get all the facts." (But Justice and the F.B.I. officials testified that they had received no such orders.)

Even those few highlights of the public record destroy any claim that Richard Nixon acted after March 21 as a man of ordinary honor and sensitivity would have had to act. The President has a good lawyer now, who will try to put the best face on it all. But the facts are in the way. So are the President's explanations. Last April 15 he said that on March 21 he had been told nothing about giving money to the Watergate criminals "to procure silence." Last week he said John Dean had told him on March 21 of payments to the defendants "for the purpose of keeping them quiet." In conspiracy cases such inconsistent statements are often taken as evidence of guilt.

Conclusion By Grand Jury Reported . . .

Hush Money Paid March 21

©The New York Times

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH

Washington — The Watergate grand jury concluded that a disputed hush money payment to the attorney for E. Howard Hunt Jr. was made on the evening of March 21, less than 12 hours after a White House meeting involving President Nixon, sources close to the investigation said Tuesday.

The sources said specific testimony fixing the date and time of payment — which has been challenged by the White House — was provided to the grand jury by Frederick C. LaRue, former Republican re-election committee official who served as go-between in hush money payments.

In an interview with the New York Times, James D. St. Clair, Nixon's attorney, pointedly drew attention to a chart published after the Senate Watergate Committee's hearings last summer in which Hunt, one of the Watergate burglars, placed the final date of payment as March 20.

St. Clair also explicitly referred to what he characterized as a discrepancy between "sworn testimony" before the Senate committee, citing March 20 as the date of payment and the cover-up indictment, which listed March 21.

St. Clair's point obviously was that if the payment did take place on the 20th, it could not have been authorized as a result of the March 21st meeting Nixon attended.

During their Senate testimony, Hunt and LaRue expressed vagueness about the precise date of the payment — the last delivery of hush money to Hunt's attorney, William Bittman.

As the President's attorney, St. Clair was not restricted in his comments by the gag rule imposed two weeks ago by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica on all parties cited in the Watergate cover-up indictments.

The Times's sources, who have been extremely reliable in the past but did not wish to be quoted by name because of the judge's order, conceded LaRue's vagueness before the Senate but said the delivery date of March 21 cited in the indictments had been, in the words of one official, "very firmly established by the grand jury."

"That's one of the problems a defense lawyer has," one source said in reference to St. Clair. "He doesn't know all that the prosecutors know."

"They can firmly establish the March 21st date in many ways," he added.

Another closely involved official noted that the White House attack on the deliery date was not surprising "because they know that the guts of the conspiracy case revolves around the March 21st meeting with the President and the payment of $75,00 to Hunt."

The March 1 cover-up indictment of seven former White House and re-election committee officials, including top presidential aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, cited four overt acts beginning with the March 21 meeting and culminating with the cash payment to Bittman.

The New York Times and the Washington Post have reported that the grand jury concluded in a still-secret report given to Judge Sirica that Nixon was implicated in the cover-up.

A key factor in the conclusion, reliable sources made clear in telephone interviews Tuesday, was Nixon's role March 21. In a news conference last week, Nixon acknowledged that he had been told by John W. Dean III, former White House counsel, that huge payments were being made to the Watergate break-in team.

Dean testified to the Senate committee and before the grand jury, sources said, that he told the President of the cover-up and had also presented Hunt's threat to expose the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's former psychiatrist and other "seamy" details of his activities with the secret White House "plumbers" unit unless he received more hush money.

But Dean, in his initial Senate testimony, mistakenly placed the date of that conversation with Nixon as March 13, 1973. Sources have told the New York Times that Dean subsequently told Senate investigators and the Watergate grand jury that the conversation took place March 21.

In his interview, St. Clair took careful note of the Dean discrepancy, and suggested he was "no longer part of the prosecution's case" in the Watergate cover-up. Earlier, St. Clair and Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Senate Republican leader, had publicly attacked Dean's credibility.

Other sources close to the Watergate investigation characterized St. Clair's remarks about the delivery date of the $75,000 and his renewed suggestions about Dean's credibility as a shrewd attempt to "get Dean scarred before he can be used" in a public trial.

"If they (the White House attorneys) can prove that the act of delivering the $75,000 took place before the March 21 meeting, they're in the clear," one official noted.

St. Clair Says He Is Presidency's Lawyer

©The New York Times

By LESLEY OELSNER

Washington — James D. St. Clair says he represents "the office of the presidency," not the occupant of that office "individually."

He says it over and over, firmly if politely, drawing the line for the public record — "I don't represent Mr. Nixon personally, I represent him in his capacity as President."

In drawing that line, he neatly complemented in an interview the President's defense in a series of legal moves growing out of Watergate. For Nixon, in refusing for months to turn over the Watergate tapes to the special prosecutor, in refusing now to give certain material to the House impeachment inquiry, has explained that he is acting to protect the presidency, not himself.

Nixon has contended that he must protect the executive branch of the government against incursions by the judicial or legislative braiches; he has said he must not allow the presidency to be weakened, lest other presidents in the future be unable to carry out the job set for them by the Constitution.

And St. Clair in describing his work, said he spent much of his time trying to insure that there were no "unwarranted" incursions.

The line St. Clair has attempted to draw, between the presidency and the present occupant of that office, has other uses as well

Many of the President's critics, of course, have contended that Nixon's actions so far have hurt the office of the presidency in many ways. And it is obvious that if St. Clair ultimately succeeds in his defense of Nixon, he will have saved Nixon the individual — and not necessarily the office of the presidency.

St. Clair, however, is adamant in spelling out his role. And the distinction he attempts to draw, between the presidency and the present occupant of that office, serves other purposes in addition to bolstering his client's defense.

St. Clair's acceptance of the Nixon assignment last Jan. 4, for instance, raised some questions among his fellow lawyers and elicited some criticism too, despite the tradition of lawyers' taking on cases whether or not they believed in their clients' cause.

By saying his client is the presidency rather than Nixon — and by calling his job simply "a professional engagement," albeit one of "significant importance" — St. Clair in effect answers those who wondered, privately and in some cases publicly, why he would work for Richard Nixon.

On a practical level, moreover, St. Clair's distinction, if it is accepted, may answer the questions that have been raised about who should pay the President's legal bills.

St. Clair's salary is $42,500; he has seven lawyers working with him on Nixon's Watergate defense team, and, he said in the interview, he may hire at least three more. He also has several nonlawyers on his staff. The total bill, should Nixon be impeached and this defense team continue working through the trial of the impeachment, could thus go as high as several hundred thousand dollars.

At the moment the entire staff is paid by government funds. But last January, at a news conference, Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said there might come a point when Nxion should take over the cost himself — paying the bills by a "defense fund," perhaps.

Import Ban Hoped

Las Vegas, Nev. (UPI) — The Clark County district attorney's office said there was not enough evidence to proceed with arraignment of Linda Lovelace, star of the film "Deep Throat," on charges of possessing cocaine and dangerous drugs.

Mrs. Mitchell Asserts Husband Was Framed

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Mitchell said Tuesday that her husband was framed and that the White House had tried to silence her by falsely tagging her as crazy or alcoholic.

"It is the normal thing that the White House does," said the estranged wife of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

She declined to identify the important people in the Nixon administration who, she said, wanted to get rid of her as a nuisance.

Mrs. Mitchell, interviewed on the NBC-TV program "Today," declined to blame Mitchell for her troubles or the breakup of their marriage.

Mitchell, who has moved to a hotel, is on trial in federal court accused of trying to squelch a fraud investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in return for a $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Milk In Jeopardy?

San Antonio, Tex. (UPI) — The nation's largest dairy cooperative said the American milk supply is in jeopardy, and called on Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to increase milk price supports to 90% of parity.

Kissinger Tries To Clarify Talk

Washington (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger acknowledged Tuesday that NATO is plagued by "real and serious" difficulties, but said the United States is "determined to resolve them with patience and good will."

Kissinger's statement, read to reporters by department spokesman George Vest, said "the overwhelming problem today is to construct a cooperative world" and the "essential component of this is unity in the West."

Vest said Kissinger's statement was being issued to place in proper "context" remarks the secretary made in a speech Monday to a large number of congressional wives being briefed on foreign policy.

The Kissinger statement stressed the theme of Western unity, which he acknowledged was being tested by a series of disputes between the United States and its allies in Western Europe. He did not touch on other aspects of the lengthy Monday briefing, saying that since it was supposed to be "private," he would not go beyond acknowledging difficulties and pledging to work diligently to resolve them.

In the briefing, Kissinger said that in the realm of foreign policy it was often easier to deal with adversaries such as the Soviet Union than it was to get full cooperation among allies.

In the speech itself, but not mentioned in Kissinger's Tuesday statement, was a reference to efforts by European nations to seek separate oil deals with the Arab-producing nations.

The United States has no objection to an independent European policy but "it does have an objection when, in a crisis, which can only be dealt with cooperatively, the Europeans adopt a competitive posture."

He also said in the private speech that "Europe has never recovered from World War I" because no government in Europe has ever "fully regained public confidence."

Apparently dismayed because his background remarks Monday had appeared in the press more quickly than usual, Kissinger Tuesday authorized his spokesmen to issue the following statement:

"The overwhelming problem today is to construct a cooperative world. The essential component of this is unity in the West.

"In the last year, in trying to inject a new vitality into the Atlantic relationship, we have encountered difficulties in working out consultative practices that would meet the needs of all.

"These difficulties are real and serious and will take some time to resolve. But we are determined to resolve them with patience and good will.

"Our overriding objective is to preserve the unity of the West, which has brought us to this point and which is even more essential for our future."

British Promised Vote On Euromart

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government pledged on Tuesday it would concentrate on overcoming the country's economic troubles and promised Britain another vote on terms of its membership in the Common Market.

The policy statement by the minority government, read by Queen Elizabeth II at the opening of the 46th Parliament, avoided mention of some of Wilson's more controversial campaign promises, including nationalization of several big industries.

The address listed a string of moderate measures aimed at restoring "national unity at this difficult time" and achieving fairer shares for all Britons through a redistribution of wealth.

The queen said the new government would seek a "fundamental renegotiation of the terms of entry to the European Common Market." Later Wilson said the outcome of those negotiations would be put to the British people at the ballot box, and "their decision will be final."

The monarch opened Parliament in a simple ceremony that recalled the austerity of the war years.

The imperial crown was not on view. The queen arrived by limousine rather than in the traditional horse-drawn coach and she wore a daytime rather than evening dress.

The legislative program included such domestic goals as food subsidies, higher pensions, price curbs, new rules to govern industrial relations, more homes and more consumer protection.

On the foreign front Wilson gave pledged loyalty to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, promised to spend less on defense and called for a middle course in the Middle East.

High on the list of Labor party priorities during the election campaign was the nationalization of such big industries as shipbuilding, sections of the aviation industry and drugs. But those projects were omitted from the queen's speech, apparently to avoid an early confrontation with the opposition.

"My government will give the highest prority to overcoming the economic difficulties created by rising prices, the balance of payments deficit and the recent dislocation of production," the queen told the assembled parliamentarians and diplomats.

"My ministers will work for a greater measure of social justice as a prerequisite of national unity at this difficult time."

Her remarks suggested a tough annual tax budget would be submitted March 26, with the wealthy paying more taxes to help the needy.

The debate on the royal address began in the House of Commons soon after the queen finished speaking.

Huge Radio Telescope Being Built

©The New York Times

Socorro, N.M. — A $76 million federal project to construct the world's largest and most sophisticated radio astronomy telescope to probe new distances into space has been begun on an isolated, arid ranch area near the eastern slopes of the Continental Divide.

The site of the facility, which will incorporate an entirely new concept in radio telescopes, is an ancient lake bed in the 7,000-foot-elevation plains of San Augustin where the 19th-century silver and copper mines made fortunes.

The project, funded by the National Science Foundation and known as the Very Large Array, is scheduled to be completed in 1981. It will consist of five centrally located buildings and 27 dish-shaped radio telescope antennas 82 feet in diameter and 92 feet high that may be moved to any of the 100 observing stations along a 37-mile double-track railway system laid out in the form of a "Y".

The facility is designed to provide the most sensitive equipment available in the world with high speed maneuverability and high resolution. It is expected to furnish major contributions to a better understanding of the laws of gravity, magnetic fields, the nature of energy-emitting gases between the stars, and the origin and evolution of the universe.

Edward Heath, the Conservative opposition chief who was ousted as prime minister by the Feb. 28 election, said if Labor chooses quick popularity at the expense of Britain's real problems then his party would fight it to the finish.

There would, on the other hand, be Conservative backing for tackling those difficulties in a way the whole country could support, Heath stressed.

U.S. Air Base In Indian Ocean To Take B52s

(c) Washington Star News

Washington — Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clemens Jr. and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, agreed Tuesday that the planned American base on the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean would be able to take giant B52 bombers.

At a meeting of the Senate Armed Services Committee, both agreed with a question from acting Chairman Stuart Symington, D-Mo., that the proposed 12,000-foot runway could accommodate "aircraft tankers, B52 bombers, and other heavy cargo aircraft."

Expansion Limits In Trouble

(Editor's Note: Jenness Keene reports from the San Francisco Bureau of McGraw-Hill World News. Daniel Moskowitz covers legal affairs in the Washington Bureau.)

By Daniel Moskowitz and Jenness Keene

Can citizens of small towns say, "thanks, but no thanks" to subdividers and developers, and move to keep their towns small, friendly places, with minimum crowding, pollution and crime?

Yes! says Petaluma, Calif., a town of 31,000 population, which increased its numbers by nearly two-thirds in less than a decade.

No! answers the construction industry, and for now, at least, the courts.

Early this year, Federal Judge Lloyd H. Burke, sitting in San Francisco, ruled that Petaluma's growth control plan is unconstitutional. Now Mayor Helen Putnam and the city council are considering an appeal, and the "landmark" case is expected to reach the United States Supreme Court.

Adopted In '72

Petaluma, famous to "Peanuts" comic strip readers as the home of the world wrist wrestling championships, adopted its plan in 1972.

Other cities have enacted growth control legislation, usually through large-lot zoning, building moratoriums or requirements that developers provide open space and other facilities.

The Petaluma plan is unique in that it limits the number of housing units to be built annually, says where single family and multiple housing shall be located, and grades developers' plans on a point system.

Judge Burke told the voters of Petaluma, that they have no inherent right to keep their city aloof from the spread of urban growth that reaches northward of the peninsula from San Francisco. On the contrary, he ruled, their attempts to do so conflicts with the constitutionally-guaranteed rights of every other American to move to Petaluma if he or she wants to.

Moves Against Okies Hit

The right was first spelled out by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1941, when it struck down moves by California to close its borders to the depression-driven migrant "Okies." The justices admitted that the influx put strains on California, but said there are limits on what legislatures can do.

Of course, the action by Petaluma doesn't really much constrict Chicagoans or Atlantans drawn to the Golden Gate area, as long as so many other towns on the same peninsula continue to welcome newcomers. But where do courts draw the line?

Over the years they have developed the test of "cumulative impact" under which they look, not at the single action, but ask what would be the result if every other town in the country did exactly the same thing.

Petaluma's plan, adopted on the vote of a whopping 80 per cent of the voters who turned out for a special election in June, 1972, limited new housing to 500 units a year for five years. While the town fathers feared continued fast growth would tax local schools and utilities, they also were explicit that they hoped to "preserve the small-town character."

Explanation Needed

The Petaluma decision's reasoning does not mean that cities have to open themselves up to the onslaught of the bulldozers, whether they are ready for them or not. But it does mean that if they want to slow growth the town fathers have to present, in the words of Washington housing lawyer Herbert Franklin, "a detailed explanation of how they are going to control growth and still be responsive to needs."

Petaluma, with a healthy school system and mounting surpluses in its municipally owned water company, couldn't really prove it was not ready for growth.

And since planning projections to 1990 suggested the town intended to keep the 500-units-a-year limit on well beyond its initial five-year period, Judge Burke decided the city wasn't really looking for simple breathing room to get in shape for growth.

Money Put Into Trust

By H. L. SCHWARTZ III

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Finance Committee to Re-elect the President has ended its turbulent two-year history by transferring $3.57 million to a trust fund.

Trustees of the fund told the General Accounting Office in their first financial report this week that they will continue to pay legal fees and other expenses, including an estimated $775,000 to settle major law suits arising from the Watergate break-in.

Fees for lawyers involved in defending the committee and its officials in civil actions and in preparing for Senate or grand jury appearances already have approached $1 million.

The financial report lists a $25,519 bill still owed for the committee's principal Watergate lawyer, Kenneth W. Parkinson, who was among those indicted two weeks ago in the Watergate cover-up.

The report also lists a $1,066 salary payment for this year and a $200 advance to former Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans, one of the three current trustees who headed the Finance Committee from its inception in the spring of 1972.

Paul Barrick, secretary-treasurer of the trust, said the salary check was the last that Stans will get pending outcome of his trial in New York federal court on charges arising from a $200,000 secret campaign contribution from financier Robert Vesco.

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell is a codefendant with Stans in the trial, expected to last well into the spring.

Barrick said Stans' $30,000-a-year salary was discontinued at the former Cabinet secretary's request when the trial began Feb. 20.

Barrick said he did not know why Stans drew the $200 advance which, according to the financial report, was received two days after the trial began and was repaid on Feb. 28.

"I guess he needed pocket money," Barrick said.

The Finance Committee was one of two committees charged with over-all operational control of Nixon's re-election campaign.

Serving along with Stans as trustees of the fund, called the 1972 Campaign Liquidation Trust, are Charles Potter, former U.S. senator from Michigan, and Guilford Dudley Jr., a Nashville, Tenn., insurance executive.

No one has said what will be done with the campaign surplus after all the pending litigation is done with. But the Republican National Committee has repeatedly said it should get the money.

The Committee for the Re-election of the President, which was headed briefly by Mitchell in mid-1972, handled political chores. It closed its doors last October. The Finance Committee raised the money — more than $60 million in all, making it the richest political campaign in U.S. history.

The financial report listed return of $40,000 to Braniff Airways, Inc., of Dallas, noting it was a "refund of a contribution illegally made." The contribution, made secretly in cash before a new federal disclosure law went into effect in April 1972, was first disclosed by the Finance Committee in response to a lawsuit late last year. At that time it was listed as varying cash amounts from Braniff executives with a note that the committee was trying then to determine whether it was an illegal contribution out of corporate funds.

The financial report also listed as a separate item for the first time $15,200 owed by former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

Dean, ousted as counsel after he began to tell his version of the Watergate cover-up to federal prosecutors in early 1973, told the Senate Watergate committee last June that he had custody of $15,200 which was part of a much larger secret cash fund used to pay off Watergate defendants.

Dean told the Senate committee he at one time had dipped into the cash to pay for his honeymoon, some home improvements and other daily expenses. But, he said, he had restored the funds and, on advice of counsel, had put the money in a trust at a suburban bank after he began to talk to prosecutors.

Just why he still has control of the money almost a year later is unclear.

Barrick said it was his understanding committee lawyers had asked for the money back on several occasions.

But Patrick C. McKeever, a partner of Dean's lawyer, Charles N. Shaffer, and a co-trustee of the $15,200 trust, said "no communications" had ever been received from the Finance Committee regarding the money.

Mitchell Not Asked To Fix Case—Sears

NEW YORK (AP) — Government witness Harry Sears testified Tuesday that he never asked former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell to "fix" financier Robert L. Vesco's fraud case with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"Never, at any time," Sears said at the Federal criminal conspiracy trial of Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans.

In cross-examination, Sears was taken back over a series of meetings he had with Mitchell on behalf of Vesco, a secret $200,000 contributor to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign. Mitchell's attorney, Peter Fleming Jr., then asked:

Q. There was nothing clandestine, was there, Mr. Sears.

A. No, sir. There wasn't.

Q. Do you know what 'to fix a case' means?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attempt to fix the Vesco case with Mr. Mitchell?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Mitchell to fix the Vesco case?

A. Never, at any time.

Vesco's $200,000 contribution to Nixon's campaign is at the heart of the government's case against Mitchell and Stans, who are accused of impeding an SEC fraud investigation into Vesco's international financial operations, in return for the donation.

Sears, former Republican majority leader of the new Jersey state Senate, was indicted with Mitchell and Stans but was granted immunity from prosecution for his testimony on behalf of the government. Vesco also was indicted but fled the country.

Under direct examination for the better part of five days, Sears had testified that he turned over the contribution to Stans in Washington on April 10, 1972, then went to Mitchell's office. The two defendants had quit their Cabinet job to direct Nixon's re-election campaign.

There was further testimony that Sears told Mitchell of the exchange of money and that the latter then picked up the telephone and arranged for Sears to meet that same day on Vesco's behalf with the then-SEC Chairman William Casey.

Fleming asked Sears if Mitchell hadn't promised the meeting with Casey a month before the contribution was made, depending only upon when the SEC chairman was available.

"That's correct," Sears said.

Sears was confronted with his grand jury testimony that he had not even discussed the campaign contribution with Mitchell April 10.

"Even today you have no recollection of ever telling Mr. Mitchell at that time, April 10, that the contribution was in cash?" asked Fleming.

"I never told him that," replied the witness. "I should qualify that — I never told him that until much later."

Sears testified that Mitchell's first attempt to arrange a meeting with Casey fell through because the SEC chairman was out of town.

Q. This was before any contribution was delivered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I not correct that there was no connection between the contribution and your meeting Mr. Casey?

A. Absolutely none.

Doyle Explains State Rule On Political Signs

Political advertising may not be erected within 660 feet of the Interstate and important highway system right of ways unless they comply with federal and state regulations, State Roads Director Tom Doyle recently reiterated.

Federal laws and LB1181 passed by the Legislature in 1972 prohibit such signs, he said.

Doyle said that if signs in violation of those laws are found on public land, candidates and followers responsible will be given 48 hours to remove them. After that, the state will, he said.

If the signs are on private land, he said, legal action may be taken.

Bauxite Producers End Conference In Yugoslavia

Belgrade (AP) — A conference of bauxite-producing countries has ended in Konakry, Tanjuy, the Yugoslav news agency reported.

The conference on ministerial level convened Guinea, Guyana, Australia, Zambia, Yugoslavia, Surinam and six other sountries as observers.

It adopted an agreement on setting up an international association for bauxite that will promote their cooperation, speeding up their countries' economic and social transformation.

Many observers see the conference as a prelude to higher prices.

Attorney Plans To Show Evidence Of Racial Bias

Omaha (AP) — An attorney said Tuesday he will introduce evidence in the trial of the government's discrimination suit against the Omaha School District to show there has been racial bias in hiring of teachers and in student assignments in schools.

Attorney Robert Pressman of the Center for Law and Education at Harvard University, who represents third-party intervenors in the case, said discrimination has been motivated partly by perceived opposition of whites to blacks in majority white schools.

Pressman made his opening statement after U.S. Justice Department attorney Ross Connealy rested the government's case.

Connealy called 15 witnesses in the trial's first six days. He said Tuesday he may call another witness.

Pressman indicated he would stress many of the points already raised by the government, but will add others.

He told the court that the intervenors, representing 32 Negro parents and children, will introduce evidence regarding alleged public and private housing discrimination. He said the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that school patterns can affect housing patterns. He said Tech High School has been virtually closed while new schools have been built on the periphery of the school district far away from the black community.

Pressman' first witness was Dennis Holland, president from 1947-1954 of the DePorres Club, which he said was formed to identify discrimination and segregation in Omaha and try to eliminate it.

Holland testified the group picketed the Joslyn Castle and North, Central, Tech and South High Schools in 1959, protesting the school district's failure to employ and assign black teachers and hire black clerks.

On cross-examination by school board attorney Gerald Laughlin, Holland was asked if current statistics showing 19.4% of the assistant principals in the district are black and the number of majority white schools with black teachers has increased fromsix to 54 since 1961.

Holland said, however, that the club was concerned not only with hiring but also with placement of blacks.

Connealy read parts of a deposition from school board member Tim Rouse taken Feb. 8.

The deposition quoted Rouse as saying he considered Tech an "economically unsound building" extensively underutilized because of low enrollment.

Rouse was not present, but Connealy told Schatz he could have been called to testify.

Police Trade Plan Given Tentative OK

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Gov. J. J. Exon has given tentative approval to an Omaha plan to trade undercover officers with two other cities.

Exon met with Mayor Edward Zorinsky and said the plan to exchange undercover policemen with Minneapolis and Des Moines "sounds just fine."

However, the governor said he wants the attorney general and State Patrol to comment before giving the plan his endorsement.

The proposal would be funded by a $266,000 federal grant. The three cities would pay about $10,000 each for the 18-month project.

Officials say the problem at present is that an undercover officer loses his usefulness quickly when his identity becomes known by a few drug users, for example.

John Jackson, director of the Omaha-Douglas County Criminal Justice Center, said the plan is to hire an executive director for the program at an annual salary of $16,000.

Jackson said the program is primarily for compiling cases against major drug pushers, but it also would be used for such things as burglary and auto theft rings operating in several cities.

Exon was asked for his endorsement because the federal funds would come through state crime commissions.

Motor Carriers Granted Rate Hike

The state Public Service Commission reported Tuesday it has granted Nebraska motor carriers a rate increase, its third in recent months to offset higher fuel costs.

The rate hike, 3% for most truckers and commercial buses and 4½% for petroleum carriers, was granted on an emergency basis, effective this Saturday.

James Paine, the commission's rate officer, said in an interview that this latest increase should allow common carriers to cover current fuel costs without additional rate hikes.

Any further rate hikes for fuel reasons, Paine said, will have to be proved essential.

A recent Interstate Commerce Commission order granted interstate carriers an immediate 6% rate hike to cover higher fuel costs, and the I.C.C. recommended all state regulatory commissions to follow its lead.

However, a spokesman said the commission refused to grant a 6% rate increase without justification from the carriers.

Paine said the commission's decision was unanimous and added there was no attempt by any commissioner to allow a higher rate increase.

In recent months, the commission has granted petroleum carriers a 4½% rate increase and general commodity carriers a 3% rate hike to reflect higher fuel costs.

Paine reported that two additional surcharge applications are pending before the commission: a request by commercial buses for a 6% rate increase and one from the oilfield carriers for another 2.85%. Those applications cited rising fuel costs.

Reclamation Signup Still Short

Grand Island (UPI) — The signup of farmer-landowners in the Mid-State Reclamation District in Hall, Merrick and Buffalo Counties still was short of the 140,000-acre goal, Robert Lowry, district chairman, announced here.

Lowry said the signup was still under the 100,000-acre mark and that staff limitations had made it difficult to contact all landholders in the district.

He said interest has been shown by some farmers outside the district boundaries and some thought was being given to enlarging the boundaries. No firm action was to be taken in this regard for another 30 days, he said.

Federal authorization for the mid-state project carries a stipulation that 140,000 acres would have to be signed up before construction could begin.

Lowry also defended the district's position in response to a recent attack on the district project by the Izaak Walton League, which charged the project would take too much water from the Platte River.

Lowry said the annual requirement of 300,000 acre-feet needed for mid-state would come from an annual flow averaging 800,000 acre feet. Last year the flow was more than two million acre-feet he said.

Evaluation Planned

London (AP)—The British post office said it will soon start a two-year evaluation of a battery-powered van to determine whether electric vehicles are suitable for telephone and service work.

Equipment Shortage End Seen

Omaha (AP) — Members of the Midwest Retail Farm Equipment Association were told the "critical shortage of farm equipment will be over" by 1976.

The comment came from Orville T. Athen of Hamburg, Iowa, president of the association which has more than 400 members in Nebraska, Wyoming and western Iowa.

The group ended a two-day convention in Omaha on Tuesday.

During the period until the shortage eases, Athen said, a "dealer must be completely honest and deal fairly with his customers if he wants to retain them in the years ahead."

He said farm equipment dealers are selling at list price because of the shortage, but the long-time dealer is not taking advantage of the situation "because he wants to stay in business after this period is over."

Robert Sargent Sr., association director and International Harvester dealer at Beatrice, said his allotment of new tractors for 1974 was 16. During the past 14 years, he said,his dealership has sold an average of 25 annually.

Sargent said he was approaching the shortage problem by making certain all new units were placed within the local community.

Feeders In Southwest Have Same Problems

A four-day beef study tour in Arizona and Southern California showed Nebraska feeders that their counterparts in the Southwest are experiencing the same problems, but with even higher feed costs.

Ninety Nebraska cattlemen and their wives participated in the tour, sponsored by the University of Nebraska Extension Service and the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association.

Purpose of the tour, according to NY Extension livestock specialist Paul Q. Guyer, was "to look over feedlots land the cattle feeding business to see how competitive Southwestern feeders are with Nebraska feeders and to see if they are doing some things that we could apply here."

According to Guyer, "Cattle feeders in the Southwest are as concerned as Nebraska feeders about cattle prices, feed costs, cost of gains and profit potentials."

But some differences do exist, he pointed out. For instance, Southwest cattle feeders ship in 50% of their grain. "We saw corn and hominy feed shipped from Nebraska in some of the lots.

"Costs of feed are high — up $150 a ton dry basis for rations containing 10-12% alfalfa as the only roughage. Costs in Nebraska are in the $100-$120 range if we add on for yardage."

Of special interest to the Nebraskans was the year-round alfalfa production. The first of seven cuttings had just started when they arrived. Guyer noted that a coming decrease in alfalfa production will make roughage prices higher yet.

Losses on cattle for farmer-feeders in Nebraska are offset by the high grain prices, he continued, "but losses on cattle in the feedlot are absolute except in cases where part of the loss can be recovered from tax liability in the preceding two or succeeding three years."

Another main difference, Guyer said, is that most large feedlots in the Southwest are "cattle hotels," where the feedlot owner/operator feeds out other peoples' cattle. In contrast, about 90% of the Nebraskans on the tour feed only their own cattle.

Truck Driver Is Taken With Meat Hijackers

FISHKILL, N.Y. (AP) — A driver from Spencer, Iowa, was forced to briefly accompany three men who hijacked a truck loaded with meat Tuesday, State Police said.

L. E. Van Buren was standing near the truck at a rest stop on Interstate 84 when an object was pressed against his back, according to authorities. Police said he was released unharmed in nearby East Fishkill.

Van Buren was driving an Iowa Packing Co. truck from Dakota City, Neb., to Boston.

His address is 517 E. 8th St.

UNL Rodeo Group Plans Annual Meet

Members of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Rodeo Association will present their seventh annual intercollegiate rodeo April 12-13 at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum.

Eight states from the Great Plains Region will supply the contestants. Students representing colleges and universities in Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and Nebraska will compete, according to Debbie Wurtele, publicity director for the NU Rodeo Club.

Three rodeo performances are scheduled: 8 p.m. on April 12 and 13, and 1:30 p.m. on April 13. The 1974 Nebraska rodeo queen will be crowned by Regent Ed Schwartzkopf during the opening performance. The final performance will also have an added attraction: the 10 contestants having the best scores or times in the first two performances will compete for top placings.

Student cowboys will compete in the traditional bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, ribbon roping and bullriding. Cowgirls will be riding full tilt as they view for prizes in barrel racing, goat tying and breakaway roping.

According to Wurtele, the NU students have been "working like slaves" to finance this special event. Rodeo club members were "sold" in a slave auction last fall, with all proceeds designated for the rodeo.

Women Landowners' Workshops Scheduled

Women who own farmland will get some exclusive attention to their questions at five workshops scheduled throughout the state in April, announced Dr. Phil Henderson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension ag economist.

A similar workshop was held two years ago with encouraging results and a request to move the workshop to several outstate locations, explained the Extension economist.

Henderson, aided in each location by a different crew of district economists and local managers, will present a program designed for women farmland owners on these dates: April 9, Grand Island; April 16, North Platte; April 17, Scottsbluff; April 19, Norfolk; and April 26, Peru State College.

Topics for each location include costs that a landlord might expect in 1974, the usual provisions of farm leases, different approaches to setting cash rent, services available through professional managers, considerations that should be studied when choosing a tenant, and estate planning.

Power Systems Study Proposed

Another between-sessions study of Nebraska's public power systems was proposed in the Legislature Tuesday by Sen. Gerald A. Stromer of Kearney.

A decision on the study will be made later.

"Disputes presently exist which concern wholesale and retail rates, territorial protections, transmission, generation and service to individual citizens," the resolution said.

Stromer proposed that the study committee "be empowered to hold public meetings, summon and compel such witnesses as may be necessary" to accomplish the study.

Jail Treatment Is 'Degrading'

. . . Letter Cites Papillion

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha civil rights leader has complained to Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., that Mexican nationals detained for illegal entry into the United States have received "degrading" treatment in a Papillion jail.

In a letter dated March 8, Joseph Ramirez, a member of the state advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Service Commission, detailed his encounter of the previous day with Sarpy County officials concerning the case of one such prisoner, Jesus Hernandez.

A spokesman for McCollister's office said Tuesday, however, that the letter has not been received. And the Sarpy County jail warden declined to comment on the charges.

Hernandez, a member of Local 271 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, was visited by Ramirez and two union officials. The letter said:

"We found first of all that the prisoner was barefoot. When we asked about it, we were told that . . . it was a procedure to have 'these' types of prisoners take off their shoes and give them back upon release from jail."

Shoes Used In Beating

The reason for that is that someone at one time had beaten another prisoner with his shoes. These prisoners then had to remain without shoes during their detention.

"We were also advised not to give the prisoner anything. When we asked if we could not give him cigarettes, we were told that, no, this was not permitted as 'these' prisoners had at one time set the mattresses on fire.

"Also, we were told that 'these people were hard to handle, very dirty, and never took a shower, and that it was necessary to at times force them bodily into a shower."

In his letter to McCollister, Ramirez said he was informed that, over the past several years, the jail has housed some 500 detainees for periods of time ranging from a "few days to as long as five weeks."

Under Contract

They are quartered by the Sarpy County jail under contract for the Immigration and Naturalization Department until they can be returned to Mexico.

Jail Warden Daniel Langfeld, while disputing the facts contained in the letter, declined to comment on them.

"I will say that with regard to the cigarettes, these people come here with no money," Langfeld told UPI. "I can't give them any cigarettes. You know how much money I make."

Sarpy County Sheriff Patrick Thomas could not be reached for comment.

The letter concluded: "I protest this type of treatment to these type of prisoners. They happen to be Mexican, so different rules are applied . . . To me this is degrading, depriving someone of his humanity. They are treated worse than animals, when in fact, they are human beings."

108 YEARS . . . of history in Butler County demolished by vandals.

Towner Cabin Is Pulled Down

. . . By Vandals In Ulysses

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Ulysses — The Towner cabin stood for 108 years before vandals pulled it down in a few minutes of abandon one recent evening.

In a way, the entire recorded history of rural Butler County now lies in a rubble of ancient logs in the Ulysses town park.

But the mishap wasn't enough to destroy the weather-beaten, hand-hewn landmark.

Already relocated once when the town celebrated its centennial in 1967, it will be rebuilt again in a different corner of the town park. Its present place will be taken by a combination ice rink and tennis-basketball court.

"We're going to try and put it back up," said village board chairman Nick Kratochvil, noting that the six-inch squared, dovetailed logs weren't damaged when pranksters yanked out a loose log and collapsed the entire structure under cover of night.

"If it was put up right and stained it would look real good," he said of the cabin, believed to be the earliest one built in the area.

The log cabin, originally a two-story structure, sat for 101 years on the banks of the Big Blue River northwest of here.

The first home in Read Township, it was built by Civil War veteran Abraham Towner, who squared the logs by hand and notched the ends to avoid using nails.

It served as the Towner home as the pioneer family raised its first crop, watching anxiously as Indians camped on a knoll across the river.

The 14-by-16-foot building was donated to Ulysses by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pribyl during the town's centennial year. It was dismantled by volunteers and reassembled piece by piece in the town park.

The two had recently removed a protective wire fence, intending to move the cabin to its new site, when the vandals struck, Kratochvil said. The Butler County sheriff's office is investigating, he said.

Fort Robinson Grant Gets Provisional OK

Grand Island (AP) — The Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission gave provisional approval to a $15,000 grant for Ft. Robinson, a historic cavalry post.

The grant would provide funds available from the commission if the Fort Robinson commission can provide matching funds.

The state group also endorsed a $5,514 grant to the Winnebago tribe, with the same provision. The money would be used to develop 3,000 acres of timberland on the reservation.

The Lutheran Church has given about $8,000 to the project, intended to create a self-supporting industry.

Final approval of the matching funds was delayed because appropriations by the national commission still are pending.

Nine towns were endorsed to become bicentennial communities. They include Brownville, Plattsmouth, Fairfield, Coleridge, Ravenna, South Sioux City, York, Allen and Seward.

Wilber and Bellevue previously had been given bicentennial community status by the national commission.

Bomb Threat Is Phoned Into Columbus High

Columbus (UPI) — The Columbus Senior High School received a bomb scare from an unidentified caller Tuesday morning, but a subsequent search turned up nothing.

Romania Tour Planning Halted By A 3-3 Vote

Holdrege (AP) — A tie vote during a school board meeting here will apparently stop the Holdrege High School Swing Choir from making a tour of Romania this summer.

The group was one of 25 chosen by the Ambassadors of Friendship to make the 21-day tour, and choir director Ron Nelson told board members the proposed trip would cost an estimated $725 per student.

Several board members questioned the feasibility of such a trip for a high school group.

When the vote was taken on the trip request, the tally showed three for, and three against. The tie means the group will not be going.

It is not known if the issue will surface again during the next board meeting.

Denver — Two Nebraska counties received $4,956.65 from the U.S. Treasury, representing 25% of the receipts from the Oglala National Grassland managed by the USDA Forest Service. The funds are derived from grazing permits and other uses on the surface, as well as oil, gas and other minerals sold on the National Grasslands. Sioux County's share was $3,947.13, while Dawes County received $1,009.52.

Watergate Issue Avoidance Hoped

Bellevue (AP) — Gov. J. James Exon said Monday night he hopes Watergate doesn't become a part of the gubernatorial campaign.

But if it does, he said, it wouldn't be unfair.

Exon, who seeks Democratic renomination, addressed about 200 persons at Bellevue College.

As the incumbent, Exon said, "I think the main issue has to be whether this administration has been acceptable to the voters or not."

The governor added: "If I am re-elected, I hope I won't be returned because an opponent is connected with the party with the Watergate problems, but the GOP must be prepared to carry the burden of its administraton just as we struggling Democrats have had to do in the past."

Exon cited the 1966 elections when he said many good Democrats were put out of office "due to the unpopularity of Lyndon Johnson."

The governor also told the college audience that one of the key problems facing Nebraska is to reverse the trend away from higher education.

Exon cited statistics showing a declining percentage of college graduates seeking additional education, and said "we've got to do a better job of selling on education."

In a later speech in Omaha, Exon urged Nebraska Democrats not to anticipate automatic victories over the Republicans in 1974 because of Watergate.

He admitted being "encouraged" by Democratic candidates' victories in special congressional elections in traditionally Republican districts in Michigan and Ohio in the last two weeks.

"But, Republicans are still a majority in this state," he said. "I think what we have to do is not take anything for granted."

Noting that "Republican turnouts in the last two elections" have dropped, State Democratic Chairman Richard White said, "I think the Democratic party is going to win a tremendous victory."

Cavanaugh Quitting Commissioner's Race

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Commissioner John J. Cavanaugh's announcement that he would not seek re-election caught other board members by surprise.

A 17-year veteran of the board, Cavanaugh appeared at a news conference and read a prepared statement saying he was not going to run because "the time has come for me to devote myself to my personal and family interests."

Cavanaugh refused to answer questions after reading the statement.

"It was completely unexpected," said commissioner P.J. Morgan. "The last conversation I had with him he indicated he was running."

Morgan, the only Republican on the five-member board, said Cavanaugh's decision "was even more surprising" since money was collected for Cavanaugh at a recent rally.

Cavanaugh said the funds "shall be returned to people on a pro rata basis after expenses are deducted," he said. He didn't say how much had been collected.

Morgan and commissioner George Buglewicz said they did not expect a rush of candidates to enter the race because of Cavanaugh's withdrawal. Morgan predicted 12 to 14 would file.

Commissioner Daniel Lynch said he thought the announcement would "open the floodgates."

Grant Is Offered For Shelf Study

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents will consider acceptance Saturday of a $71,600 grant from the National Science Foundation for support of the Ross Ice Shelf Project (RISP) management office located at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Since June, 1972, grants to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in support of RISP have totalled about $779,000.

The management office provides coordination of the scientific effort and logistical support for the exploration of the Ross Ice Shelf in Antarctica and will provide similar services to a Greenland Ice Sheet Project scheduled to start this summer.

Dr. Robert H. Rutford is director of the Ross Ice Shelf Project and coordinator of the management office. RISP offices are in Bancroft Hall on the NU City Campus.

During the winter of 1974, Dr. Rutford, Dr. Robert H. Thomas, and graduate student David Gaylord from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and scientists from the University of Wisconsin, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, and the U.S. Geological Survey, conducted a geophysical and glaciological survey on the Ross Ice Shelf.

Next season the scientists plan to drill through the ice shelf, making scientifically valuable surveys of the ice, the water, sediment and geological formation below it.

Under the provisions of the new grant, the management office at NU would provide support for an ice drilling project in Greenland this summer. The Greenland Ice Sheet Project will be conducted by scientists from the Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, the University of Copenhagen, Technical University of Denmark and University of Bern, Switzerland.

6 Doctoral Programs May Be Consolidated

Six doctoral programs in education will be replaced by three programs if a recommendation from the Graduate College is accepted by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents Saturday.

The recommendation resulted from a study by the Teachers College on the Lincoln campus in which goals of doctoral programs were examined and defined in the light of changing needs of students and society.

The existing six doctoral programs — elementary education, secondary education, history and philosophy of education, educational administration, educational psychology and measurements and adult education — would be replaced by the following three programs:

—Psychology and cultural studies in education, for students wishing to study social, historical, philosophical, psychological or biological foundations.

—Administration, curriculum and instruction, for students planning a career in levels of formal instruction from kindergarten through college.

—Community and human resources, for students who wish to function outside of the formal patterns of instruction.

The board will also consider a proposal to establish a master of science degree in industrial and management systems engineering.

The program will offer study and research in operations research, human factors and engineering management systems.

Campus Bylaws And Regulations Hearing Put Off

A Lincoln hearing Friday at 8 p.m. on campus regulations and bylaws has been postponed by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents.

Campus units need more time to prepare documents for the hearing, to be postponed for one or two months, according to Ralph Bradley, Regents corporation secretary.

The Board of Regents will hold its March meeting at 1 p.m. Saturday at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

N-Plant Issues Study Urged By Sierra Club

Hershey — The Platte Valley Sierra Club has urged the Department of Environmental Control to consider a number of issues at its March 21-22 hearing on a proposed power plant near Sutherland.

The generation unit, a coal-burning facility, is being constructed by the Nebraska Public Power District.

The Sierra Club wants the department to consider:

—Whether NPPD's proposed Gerald Gentleman Plant will violate state new source performance standards for particulate and sulfur oxide emissions.

—Whether the plant violates legal requirements protecting clean air areas from significant ambient air quality deterioration.

—Whether abatement measures can be taken which would enable it to operate within new source performance standards.

—Whether abatement measures can be taken by NPPD which would prevent significant deterioration of the ambient air quality.

Colin Chooses Campaign Panel

County Board Chairman Robert Colin, Sr., released the names of his re-election campaign committee Tuesday.

Dan Remigo has been named chairman, C.E. "Andy" Anderson, treasurer and Ron Dodd, finance.

Committee members include: Charles Arnold, Marlo Berg, Joy Emry, Harvey Gates, Harold Gerlach, Gunnar Johnson, Kenneth King, Wayne Stranathan, Kappie Weber and W. W. "Pat" White.

Colin, a Republican, was first elected to the County Board in 1970.

Key To Slow Inflation Said In Spending Cut

Hastings (UPI) — The key to tempering the inflationary spiral is control of government spending, Mrs. Haven Smith said Tuesday night at a meeting of members of the American Association of Retired Persons.

Mrs. Smith of Chappell, a Republican candidate for the Third Congressional District nomination, said, "inflation hits hardest at those living on fixed incomes. Our senior citizens have seen 50% of their life savings eroded away by inflation."

She said what is needed is "less government in Washington, not more."

She also commended the nation's senior citizens for their high level of participation in elections.

"While persons 65 and over make up 14% of the population, they case 21% of the ballots in the last election," according to Mrs. Smith.

Douglas Judges Are Nominees For High Court

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — State Supreme Court Judge Lawrence M. Clinton said two Douglas County District Court judges will be proposed to Gov. J. J. Exon as candidates for a Supreme Court vacancy.

Selection of Judges Donald Brodkey and John E. Murphy was announced by Clinton, nominating commission chairman, after a public hearing in Omaha Monday.

Under the so-called Missouri merit plan, Exon will select one of the two to succeed retiring Supreme Court Judge Robert L. Smith of Omaha.

Murphy, 48, and Brodkey, 64, have been judges for 17 years. Both were elected to the Omaha Municipal Court in 1956, and both were elected District Court judges in 1960.

Part-Time Job Fits Her Life

By NANCY HICKS
Star Women's Editor

Sometimes after an afternoon of work, her briefcase-lugging arm "feels four inches longer than the other."

But that's one of the few hardships in a part-time job which fits well with the business of raising a family.

Mrs. Jean Rugg, mother of three children and wife of a university professor, is also a representative for Field Enterprises Educational Corp. And in her briefcase are samples of the company products, World Book Encyclopedias, Child Craft, a children's library, and a World Book dictionary.

Mrs. Rugg is an encyclopedia salesman.

But she doesn't fit the glib, fast talking "Music Man" image.

"Low key is a better system for me. I believe the books can sell themselves," said the articulate Lincoln woman.

And she doesn't canvas neighborhoods going from door to door. Instead she makes "selective calls" using referals from other people and working within her own sphere of contacts — school, church, business. She always knows the name of the person she is contacting.

In fact, she sold her first set of books to a good friend who intended to buy World Books and simply waited for Mrs. Ruggs to finish the training course for representatives.

Mrs. Ruggs, who has a degree in geography and a private pilots's license, held many jobs before her first child was born. She was an inspector of fuses for artillery shells, a flight orderly (stewardess) in the Waves, a cartographer and a map librarian for the Library of Congress. Except for a summer job in a gift shop at Yellowstone National Park, she had never tried selling.

Then, several years ago, Mrs. Rugg was looking around for some kind of part-time job which would not be confined to definite hours and which would allow her to help augment the family income for awhile.

A neighbor, who was a Field Enterprises representative, suggested selling World Books.

It had been almost 20 years since Mrs. Rugg had last worked outside the home, when she started with the company in October, 1971.

And the job turned out to be just the kind she wanted and needed. It didn't tie her down. She could choose her own hours and thus be home when her children (junior high to college age) came home from school. And as a long-time World Book owner herself, she believed in the product.

She enjoyed the work — the opportunity to get out and meet people, the relaxed pace, and the extra money — and so continued selling longer than she first anticipated.

Mrs. Rugg confines most of her work to three or four periods during the year — before school, before Christmas, in the spring and during special promotions.

Selling is more than just having the courage to get out and knock on a door. There is much organizational work involved, Mrs. Rugg, explained. She keeps referral names by geographical area, and spends an afternoon in one area calling on several people. She must also keep lists of people who indicated they might be interested later and also those who were not interested, so that she doesn't call them again.

And unlike the salesman stories of slammed doors and crunched feet, Mrs. Rugg has found that most people are friendly and willing to listen.

Of course there are exceptions.

One afternoon Mrs. Rugg called on a home which had been referred to her by another acquaintance. She introduced herself, explaining that she represented Field Enterprises.

The words were barely out of her mouth when the woman of the house took the door in both hands, "slammed it in my face and left me standing there flabbergasted."

But in most cases women salespeople stand a better chance of getting in the door and talking to the homemaker, Mrs. Rugg believes.

In fact there is nothing unique in being a woman encyclopedia salesman. The majority (80%) of the company representatives in this area are women and the company has always employed many women, according to Cliff Herman, branch manager in Omaha.

The emphasis in recent years has been to get more women into management, he added. The new regional manager who oversees the 220 salespeople in the Lincoln area is a woman who climbed the ranks from a sales representative position.

California Is Top Producer

There's about a three to one chance that the processed tomato product you open comes from California.

More than four million tons of canning tomatoes, or 75% of all U.S. production, were grown in that state last year. Most of the production is concentrated in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys, but expansion has lengthened the processing season in both the north and south.

The Midwest ranks second to California as a tomato producer, putting out almost 15% of the total U.S. production. Most of its canning tomatoes are grown in northeastern Ohio and east-central Indiana.

Now is the time to blossom out

dear abby

Being Sorry Is Not Enough

DEAR ABBY: I took this beautiful young lady out on a date. For no reason at all, I beat her up, took her clothes off, and left her to sit in a cold locked car from midnight until dawn.

After I thought about what I had done, I went back and gave her her clothes and told her that I was sorry.

Abby, I have never done anything like that before. I have never in all my life even hit a woman. I still can't tell you what made me do it.

I have called her up several times to tell her I was sorry, but as soon as she recognizes my voice, she hangs up on me. I don't blame her, but I just want her to know that I am very sorry for what I did, and I need to hear her say that she will forgive me.

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: You're lucky she didn't report you to the police. Quit calling her. You may be earnestly "sorry" and at the same time seriously "sick." Tell your doctor what you've told me. If he doesn't recommend counseling, call your local mental health association. And do it now before you do something else you can't explain.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 17 years to a man who is good to me and the kids, but he's always been the quiet type until we have an argument, and then he explodes. For instance the other night we had an argument about the bills I ran up. (I admit, I have a tendency to overspend.)

After he yelled about that a while he said: "And another thing, why do you make FISH all the time? You know I hate fish!" I was shocked. I never knew he didn't like fish. He always ate it without saying a word.

How can a wife get her husband to say what is on his mind without waiting for it to come out in a fight?

IN THE DARK

DEAR IN: Without nagging ("Why don't you ever talk to me?"), try to involve him in conversations. The more communication you have between you, the more you will learn about his likes and dislikes. And hurry up. You're already 17 years behind!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are heartsick! Our son and his lovely wife have been married 10 years and have two adorable children. Together they have just informed us that they are getting a divorce. We were shocked.

We are quite well-known in our community and all of our friends and relatives thought our son had made the perfect marriage.

Our clergyman has advised us to ask them no questions, and to refrain from urging them to try to make a "go" of their marriage. He told us that they had sought counseling and they have been unable to reconcile their differences, so we should simply accept it.

Our question: What should we tell relatives and friends when they ask us: "What happened?"

HEARTSICK PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Tell them you don't know. (P.S. You don't owe anyone any explanations.)

Liberation Movement Frees Preacher's Wife

Today's Write On Author, who prefers to remain anonymous, lives in a small Nebraska community.

If the Women's Liberation Movement has done anything for me it has freed me to be a Liberated Preacher's Wife — not, however, in the fullest term of whatever free means to you.

I've seen too many preachers' wives — from those ready for the psychiatrist couch to wives completely void of any Christian faith (actions here do speak louder than words).

This "image" many of us judge each other with needs to be ousted out the nearest window but fast. Even to this day I catch myself going down my mental listing of what a preacher's wife should be whenever I am introduced to one! How unfair! And how is it that we are introduced to others as "This is our minister's wife," or "I want you to meet the preacher's wife." What about me just as I am? No explanations or false images to live up to. Perhaps I am a little hung up about this; let me tell you why.

In our first parish I laundered at the local laundry-mat. The chance for many lovely visits with all types of people was just great until they found out I was a preacher's wife. Then did I feel the wall come down between us but fast. To them I felt like I was holier-than-thou type of person. Ugh! How I wished I could be just 'plain Jane Doe.'

Why? Because this 'image' became a stumbling block for anyone to talk with me or I with them. We couldn't relate. I wasn't supposed to be a sinner or understand their problems. Or perhaps this image reminded them of what they weren't. My image kept me respectable. Huh? Respectable? I knew better than that.

Why must I be an image? God created me as I am. He placed me in a special location with a husband with a special occupation so we could move in and out of all social levels and relate: Relate to people as they are, as I am. How was I to relate to these people without committing some drastic 'sin' but still share my Christian faith?

How could I possibly relate to the alcoholic or the whore in my neighborhood if I was only an image to them, not a person. More important relate as a Christian woman who was and is a sinner but also one whom God loved, forgave and died for me. Because of His love for me, I can love myself but more important love and accept those around me.

Christ walked among the divorced, the alcoholic, the whore and did not contaminate himself. Why not us — by sharing how Christ helped us, perhaps we can break this image. Let Christ take care of the gossip and ugliness of our lives! Somehow through sharing, Christ can be brought down to earth and be a personal friend.

We need to be free from our husbands' image — free to move about as Christian women, accepting our role-playing now and then as the structured church demands it. I am me, a Christian woman, a wife, a mother, and then if people need to know, a preacher's wife.

So preachers' wives, arise, be free and liberated to be you — the you God intended!

How To Cope With Bill Collectors

'Collection is the seamy underside of the credit industry.'

New York (UPI) — If keeping up with bills has you down, and nearly out, you're probably a candidate for the bill collector.

Cash is down and out. Credit is down and out. The only thing that's up each month: the pile of unpaid bills.

A new book will help the likes of you and others in similar or worse straits. These include the one million this year who will have their wages attached, the 1.2 million who'll go through having their autos repossessed.

Also: the 185,000 who will have homes seized or liens placed against them. At the end of the trail are the 178,000 who will file for bankruptcy.

The book, by a George Belden (not his real name), is called "Strategies For The Harassed Bill Payer" (Grosset and Dunlap). Belden tells how to cope with the bill collector and gives a few strategies for outwitting him.

Belden describes himself as one of the foremost authorities on bill collectors.

He's had his wages attached. He's been sued. One reason for keeping his identity a secret: In the course of researching the book he accepted and applied for credit cards — and was issued many even though he had this history of bad bill-paying.

That, in fact, is one of the problems in this credit-card happy society, according to Belden. People are begged to take out credit cards — and to charge, charge, charge.

"The credit explosion is producing a multitude of credit victims, he says.

Contemporary bill collecting techniques lag behind technologies of credit promotion, as Belden sees it.

"Collection is the seamy underside of the credit industry," he says.

Bill collectors he describes feed the debtor's dread and anxiety.

"The consumer is led to believe that all the nation's credit bureaus, banks, finance companies, credit-card concerns and major retailers are interconnected like ICBM sites," Belden says.

"In actuality, coordination is nowhere near as formidable as the industry would have us believe.

The troubled debtor should not be scared by the collector's threats of implied awesome legal power.

"Credit raters and collectors are hedged in by a complex of constitutional due process provisions, by libel statutes, by such legislation as the Consumer Credit Protection act, the Fair Credit Reporting Act . . .and even the Federal Communications Commission," Belden says.

"Most of the collector's clout is derived not from technology or legal power but from subtle manipulations of the debtor's fears."

Belden tells how to cope with collectors for everything from alimony payments to utility bills. His basic strategies for debtmanship include:

— Take advantage of a check's clearing time. He maintains checks sent within a city will clear in two business days, checks sent within a thousand miles will clear in four business days; checks sent a longer distance will take five or six.

— Send an anguished letter when the pressure is on. A sample one in the book starts out — "Because of the recent earthquake, my son's amputation and other extraordinary strains on the family budget. . ."

When the debts heat up, Belden suggests you threaten the collector with, among other things, your intention to complain to the Federal Communications Commission.

Regulations prohibit use of the telephone or mails to "frighten, abuse, torment or harass."

Picks up and holds dust so it can't resettle. Leaves furniture clean and shining. Saves time and work.

Strengthening Family Life Is Topic

"Strengthening Family Life" will be the emphasis of the spring conference of the Nebraska Council on Family Relations to be held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education Saturday, March 23.

The conference is co-sponsored by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Human Development and the Family. It was designed to emphasize the possibilities of improving conditions for better family living via educational channels and to disseminate information.

Ron Daly, UNL extension family life specialist, will present the keynote address, after which participants will have the opportunity of attending two small-group section meetings or touring such facilities as the UNL Ruth Staples Laboratory, the University Educational Television building or the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Small group options are "Counseling: Parent Effectiveness Training," chaired by Mrs. Helen Redden and David Bearden of Kearney State College; "Education: A presentation of Research Concerning Family Life Program Offerings in Nebraska High Schools," directed by Mrs. Betty Dahl and Dr. Dan Murphy of the Creighton University Department of Psychology; "Family Action: Women in Contemporary Society," conducted by Mrs. Pat Knaub of the UNL Department of Human Development and the Family; and "Special Emphases: The Family as a Problem-Solving Group," under the direction of Daly.

A special section designed to give undergraduates and graduate students the opportunity to share research ideas, also will be held.

For further information, contact Barbara A. Boettcher, 472-3674.

Classes On Development Of Children Offered Soon

Two classes for parents of young children or women who care for toddlers and infants will be offered during the spring quarter in the adult education program at Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College.

"Know Your Infant and Toddler," is a course designed to help adults recognize and understand growth and development of the young child, guide the child in ways which will foster this growth, and provide wholesome, safe and attractive physical environment.

"Help Children Play" will explore how preschool children learn and develop through play. Students will have experience with children's books, records, toys and will learn the the value and philosophy of play.

The six-week evening courses will begin the week of March 25. "Know Your Infant and Toddler" will meet on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and "Help Children Play will meet Monday's from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Further information on the classes and registration is available by calling 477-5639.

Caucus Urges Involvement In Conventions

The Nebraska Women's Political Caucus is urging women to register for their political party's county convention before the March 15 deadline.

"It's a vital part of politics to involve women in the decision making party structure," said Jean O'Hara, spokeswoman for the NWPC, a bipartisan organization dedicated to encouraging women to be active in all political processes.

Women who want to register for the county conventions should go to the Election Commissioners office or county clerks office. The Democratic and Republican conventions will be held June 6.

Anyone 18 years or older and a registered party member may file to be a delegate to the convention.

The county convention delegates elect delegates to state convention, elect county party officials and select a party platform.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	1 ♠	Dble	Pass
1 NT	2 ♠	2 NT

Successful defense rests largely on adhering to well-established leads, plays and discards. But one should not always cling to rules, for the fact is that the player who never goes adventuring on the many highways and byways of the game is depriving himself of innumerable opportunities to express his independence as well as his ingenuity.

Consider this deal where West, after bidding one and two spades, found himself on lead against two notrump.

Had he led a spade on the basis that this was his longest and strongest suit, South would have made at least ten tricks—four hearts, four diamonds and two clubs—and West would have wound up a sadder, if not wiser, man.

But West donned his thinking cap and concluded that his best chance of drawing blood on the deal was to stay away from a spade lead altogether—despite its magnetic attraction.

He reasoned that, on the bidding, South was likely to have three spades to the queen and that North probably had a doubleton spade. It followed from this that East had a singleton spade, and that leading the king or any other spade would lead to a dead end.

Accordingly, West came forth with the lead of the jack of diamonds, hoping to connect quickly with East in that suit and so draw the killing spade return.

West was wrong, in a sense, since it turned out that East had absolutely nothing in diamonds. But he was right in his reasoning that a spade lead would have been fatal.

Declarer was a dead duck, once the diamond was led. He did as well as he could when he took the king and hopefully played a heart to the jack. East won with the ace, returned a spade, and West scored seven spade tricks to put the contract down three for a score of 300 points.

Comparison Shoppers like Mrs. C. D. May Prove Total Savings is the Happy Difference at . . Hinky Dinky

Gary Dallman
Manager, Hinky-Dinky Store
Gateway Shopping Center
Lincoln, Nebraska

January 20, 1974

Dear Mr. Dallman:

This morning I had an opportunity to visit one of the discount stores that is near my home, and priced several items which I purchase at Hinky-Dinky, weekly. In most cases they were two, four, & even more cents higher than the prices at Hinky-Dinky!

Total Savings was first, and it really is the only program with every day low prices. Hinky-Dinky has always been Number One with me, and Gary Dallman has always been my number one Hinky-Dinky Store Manager, as we followed you from 17th & South, to Gateway Shopping Center!

Several years back, I was shopping another local supermarket, which I choose to leave nameless. One evening I couldn't get everything I needed for the week there, so I went down to Hinky-Dinky! I was amazed! The prices were so different! Most people don't realize, and I admit I am guilty too, that they have to pay for those stamps. It is reflected in the price of the item! You don't get something for nothing! The following week after my initial visit to Hinky-Dinky, I came back and purchased my whole order, there, and in some cases was able to buy larger sizes of an item, and still come out with nine dollars in my pocket, that I wouldn't have had by shopping with the other merchant! I'm sold on Hinky-Dinky, and will continue to stay with Hinky-Dinky! The prices are excellent, the people the friendliest in town!

Thanks for everything! A very Grateful Shopper,

'Energy Worth More Than Money'—Prof

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Howard T. Odum says men don't spend money. They spend energy, which is more valuable than money since there's no way to print more when it is gone.

Odum, professor of environmental engineering at the University of Florida, also says that if the world's big powers don't make better use of their energy resources, they could find themselves dominated by smaller, energy-rich nations.

Odum is the dominant figure in the university's energy center, a loosely knit group of researchers from dozens of fields who have studied the world's energy problems for about 18 months.

A paper he prepared for the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences last year set off a flurry of arguments among traditional economists, psychologists, conservationists and engineers.

Odum argues that man's use of energy is no different than any other natural system — plant or animal. Successful systems grow and expand when energy is abundant and slow growth and maximize use of available energy when it is scarce.

The human system, he says, is in the latter state and threatens to outstrip available energy resources. And the major technological powers are the ones who have the most to lose.

"U.S. policy toward other countries is dangerous to its survival as an independent entity," he says. "The countries that hold back their richer fuel reserves while others are spending their last reserves end up with more relative power in military and economic affairs.

"The recent actions to use our reserves of fuel and other energy for business-as-usual borders on treasonous and yet was adopted by an ignorant Congress," he says.

Odum's theories aren't likely to win him friends, but they may influence people. He says the nation's most pressing problem is a lack of understanding of what energy expenditure is all about.

Odum says dollars simply represent the amount of energy used to produce a product. When prices rise, it is because the cost of the energy to produce the product rises, whether that energy represents electrical power or gasoline to get workers to factories.

Traditional business and economic remedies for inflation don't work today because they can't get to the root of the problem: a shortage of energy. And efforts to produce more energy, such as drilling for new sources of oil, simply deplete our reserves even more and create a greater demand for energy.

Odum says the United States should keep its energy reserves and pay for the privilege of using the reserves of those nations that want to sell them.

"In the first place, if one uses up one's own reserves rather than those available to economic and military competitors one makes his last situation worse," he says.

"If you go far enough at this, you will ultimately become a colony invaded either economically or militarily. To maintain independence, keep reserves as a storage to help control prices and use up everyone else's fuels first, even if one has to pay more and take a temporary cut in living standard."

Odum says America should spend less time looking for new ways to use energy and more looking for better ways to use the energy it has.

This probably would mean an end to the mobile, push-button lifestyle the nation now knows, but would not necessarily be a backward step, Odum says.

Slower speeds on highways have already saved lives, he points out. Retirees who now feel they have been shoved off to one side would find more meaningful lives in a society that places more value on handcrafts. He says that an America whose citizens relied more on walking and manual labor would probably be a healthier America.

Odum says some environmental problems could be solved by switching from polluting agriculture fertilizers that require vast amounts of energy to produce to processed natural wastes from sewage plants.

He says lowered energy use would eliminate the heavy development that has placed a strain on the nation's ecology.

Because Of Nixon Controversy:

IRS Officials Worried About Tax Loss

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public controversy over President Nixon's income taxes has set alarm bells ringing in the Internal Revenue Service, but officials of the tax agency are not sure yet whether they have a fire.

The question is whether Nixon's minimal tax payments, about $6,000 on total income of nearly $800,000 over the three years ending with 1972, may tempt other Americans to look for loopholes or try to avoid taxes.

It will be several months before the IRS can analyze enough 1973 returns to determine whether there is such a taxpayer reaction. For the present, tax officials publicly express confidence there will be none; privately, they are known to be concerned.

From around the country, in news reports, in declarations by politicians and in statements from outside tax experts, come warnings of taxpayer resistance, resulting in part from the Nixon affair, that could lead to a significant reduction in anticipated government revenues.

Johnnie M. Walters, who retired last year as IRS commissioner to go into tax law practice here, said in a recent interview that a loss of $1 billion as a result of taxpayers claiming questionable deductions would not be unrealistic.

Rep. Charles Vanik, a Democrat on the tax-writing House Ways and Means committee, predicts "a massive movement by American taxpayers into the gray areas of tax avoidance" which he said could slash revenues by as much as 10 per cent, or nearly $25 billion.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said "the fact that the President combed the tax laws for loopholes sets an example to the American people to likewise avoid or evade taxes."

A New York-based tax advisory firm told its clients that "IRS officials are afraid that average taxpayers will follow the recent examples of corner cutting politicos and do some wholesale cheating of their own." The IRS, it added, would scrutinize all returns with large business expense writeoffs.

Senior IRS officials dispute such predictions. The worst that can happen, they contend, is that many taxpayers are likely to press harder than in the past for legal but perhaps questionable deductions.

Even that, some of them concede, could result in a cutback in anticipated federal tax receipts for 1974.

"Certainly we don't expect the taxpayers to be any less honest with themselves this year," says John J. Olszewski, chief of the IRS Intelligence Division which pursues tax fraud cases.

"They are going to be either honest or dishonest, depending on their own moral standards, but not because somebody else supposedly set an example for them."

He added, that on the basis of past experience some taxpayers caught chiseling can be expected to point to the questionable records of high-ranking or prominent people in defense of their own transgressions.

Despite its outwardly calm approach, there is no doubt that the Internal Revenue Service is concerned — if not about 1974 tax collections, then about what one official calls false impressions generated by the publicity given Nixon's tax troubles and resulting speculation about how other taxpayers might react.

The controversy is awkwardly timed for the IRS, already trying hard to upgrade its efficiency and improve a public image somewhat battered by charges of favorable treatment for corporations and others using tax shelters, and by disclosure of White House efforts to use it as a weapon against political "enemies."

Informed observers say IRS officials were unhappy with the original handling of the Nixon case, in which he took substantial deductions for donating vice presidential papers to the National Archives, and claimed other tax advantages.

Concern for its reputation was a factor, the observers say, in the publicly-announced IRS decision to reopen inquiry into Nixon's tax affairs, and also in the decision to continue investigation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who quit last October after pleading no contest to one count of tax evasion in 1967.

The IRS says it had an enforcement drive under way well before the Nixon and Agnew cases came to public attention.

IRS spokesmen say audits, which fell off sharply in the decade from 1962 to 1972, have since then been on the upswing. Even with the actual number of tax returns increasing each year, the percentage audited increased slightly from 1.9 per cent in 1972 to 2.0 in fiscal 1973 and is expected to top that figure this year. IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander has set an eventual goal of five per cent in the next several years.

To accomplish this, the IRS has requested funds for 1,491 additional auditors and examiners, which would bring that portion of its 71,000-member work force to about 19,500.

Recommendations for criminal prosecutions also have gone up, the latest figures showing 1,800 in fiscal 1972 and a record high of 2,555 in fiscal 1973. While less than half of these result in conviction, the IRS says its objective is to get "maximum deterrent value" out of the cases prosecuted.

"There is no indication of a progressive increase in the number of violators," Olszewski said, adding in reply to question that IRS has no way of knowing what percentage of nation's tax cheaters it actually is discovering.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Walking down the avenues the other day (can't drive, no gas) and there in the window was the coffee grinder grandma used to use.

The sign over the door said: "Antiques". Man, that's the kind of thing that ruins your day. (Coca Cola tin trays of only yesterday have become "art deco".)

I wonder what grandma did with the coffee grinder? Likely threw it away. She ground coffee in the morning and the house filled with heavenly roast coffee smell. My grandfather imported coffee. We had the best.

The coffee grinder was cast iron. The beans went into the grinder. The ground coffee fell into a wooden drawer in a varnished box.

Nowadays they don't grind coffee in these antiques. They make them into lamps.

("We all are subject to the inevitable aging process," said the medic. "That backache may go away. And again it might not." I imagine they could make me into a lamp. What a way to go!)

☆ ☆ ☆

The antique store was not always so antique. It used to be a second-hand store. In frugal youth I furnished my modest scatter from such places. I was ironing adjectives for the dailies. They don't want to spoil the help.

I picked up second-hand stoves and beds. And chairs that sprung slivers of sharp horsehair when you sat on them.

I packed them into a second-hand Ford. (I saw one of these in an auto show. It was polished. They wanted a mint of money for it — it was that rare.)

It was a lively life. Legs fell off the beds. But I had strong nails and strong feelings about repairing the whole world.

What challenge was a collapsed bed leg? Nothing.

☆ ☆ ☆

What did grandma do with the Edison talking machine? It was the talk of the neighborhood when grandfather brought it home.

The machine talked, by golly. The records were thick as a waffle but talk came out — a vaudeville team called "Cohen and Kelly". The jokes were so good, I rolled on the floor.

Edison talking machines go for a fortune now. People lucky enough to get one put in the rumpus room. It is a conversation piece. People have a hard time making conversation so they get these pieces.

Then they talk about them.

☆ ☆ ☆

Where were my brains when I possessed this wealth? "I must have thrown away a fortune," I said.

The moppets said: "That Cap'n's sailing off soundings today. He'll be at his elevenses by 10 o'clock."

I had a magic lantern. You can see them in antique stores now. I won mine. In a barber shop raffle, my ticket won.

It showed slides of the Holy Land, holy mother! Camels and Arabs — the Arabs had no gas in those days. Just put water in the camel. There were camel lines at the waterholes.

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, they gave such million-dollar antiques to boys in those golden days. For nobody forsaw that they would be worth a million.

I expect we sold the Edison machine. And grandma threw away the priceless coffee grinder.

I made a few dollars out of the magic lantern. We started a show house in the basement. Two cents admission. If they didn't have two cents, we would take marbles.

It was satisfying and free enterprise and 100% American. With all that wealth around me, I wind up trying to pay the month's bills today.

I said to the moppets: "Fetch aft the rum!" They said: "See? What did I tell you?"

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Most persons at retirement age or beyond probably worry a little bit about keeping up with life. The Nebraska Medical Association says that most persons over 60 are properly concerned about maintaining good health and activities.

A doctor in this age group developed these "rules of conduct" for his own life: First, remember the mind stays young and flexible even though the body begins to get a bit stiff. You stay young by concentrating on keeping an active mind.

The doctor widened his friendships among young people. He said they shocked him occasionally, but he tried to understand their point of view.

The doctor and his wife exchanged more strenuous amusements for those that taxed their strength less. They also kept up their old friendships as well as making new ones.

The Nebraska Medical Association suggests that gradual adjustments help keep you in good mental health which is important in the maintenance of good general health.

Buyers Lose Bonds

Commercials On TV Used

By HENRY GOTTLIEB

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A lady from Fort Lee, N.J., was watching television one morning last year when a pleasant-voiced young man came on the screen and told her how good an investment municipal bonds were and how she could make a lot of money and how his firm — Paragon Securities — could arrange the whole thing.

It seemed like a sure thing.

Today, Paragon is bankrupt and the lady, Elfriede Levenson, and hundreds of people like her in New York, Georgia, Connecticut, Michigan and other states have lost a total of $2.9 million in undelivered bonds.

And they are still trying to recover their money. They also are wondering how 40 years after the Depression such a thing happened.

In addition to being bankrupt, Paragon's president and chief officers face civil penalties brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission. And a bill has been introduced in the U.S. Senate to bring municipal bond sellers under stricter regulation.

"We got creamed," says one investor, too embarrassed to want to be identified. "What's shocking is that in our regulated financial world such a thing could happen. It's a national scandal."

The firm's president, Michael Weissman, a 34-year-old former pre-dental student who was once quoted as saying: "I must build the biggest financial supermarket in the country — Merrill Lynch ain't seen nothing yet," incorporated Paragon in West Orange, N.J., in April 1971. A year later he and his 140 salesmen had sold $750 million worth of municipal bonds. To do this the firm spent $650,000 on the television ads that attracted Mrs. Levenson and hundreds of others.

The bankruptcy is still being sorted out and many details remain unknown, including where the money ended up. But the key to the collapse appears to be the August 1973, filing of an SEC complaint against Weissman and 10 of his officers and Paragon and its branches in Florida, California and New York.

Among the charges were false advertising, illegal high pressure tactics and fraudulent sales practices.

Four days after the charges were filed, the firm was placed in bankruptcy by three of its major creditors.

Paragon's saturation ad campaign used commercials similar to those for rock and roll records, driver training instructions and machines that slice carrots 10 ways. Investigators say it was geared to an audience unsophisticated in the ways of finance.

When Paragon went bankrupt bonds that had not yet been delivered to customers were frozen, along with the firm's other assets. It remains to be seen whether the owners will ever see them.

According to papers filed in the bankruptcy division of federal court in Newark, most of the bonds bought by Paragon were purchased through a firm called Securities Processing Service of New York.

SPS is known as a "detail house." Paragon would place an order for bonds, put up part of the money, and SPS would hold the bonds until Paragon paid the balance. In some cases, SPS would maintain paid-for bonds in trust for Paragon customers.

When Paragon went bankrupt it owed SPS $2.3 million. SPS collected by selling the bonds that people like Mrs. Levenson thought were their own.

A court order eventually stopped SPS from selling the bonds. But only about $670,000 of the money is left. The $1.1 million in the safekeeping account remains intact, however, and SPS is expected to return those soon.

In addition to the $670,000, the court-appointed trustees of the bankrupt firm hope to recoup $100,000 that Weissman borrowed from the firm. There are a few other assets such as office furniture and a yacht that the firm's officers bought to impress customers.

Frank J. Vecchione, attorney for the trustee, said there also is the problem of trade creditors who are owed about $300,000. They include IBM, which put in a claim for $217,000, and the Crest Delicatessen in East Orange, N.J., which is owed $214.

Dissatisfied Israelis Emigrating

TEL AVIV Israel (AP) — Danny Newman bought himself an airline ticket, put down the phone after talking with his travel agent, slumped in his chair and said: "I've given 10 years of my life to Israel and the army. Now I want 10 years for myself and my family to live a normal life."

Newman was making plans for a trip to Canada and Brazil to see if those countries would make suitable homes for the next decade.

Prematurely gray at 30, the Israel-born salesman says he fought in two wars and was in two raiding parties across the cease-fire lines before the 1967 Mideast conflict. Now he wants to get off what he calls the "military merry-go-round."

Depression following the war last October, inflation compounded by a continuing war economy and dissatisfaction with the government are driving hundreds — perhaps thousands — of Israelis from home. Many new immigrants are also returning to their countries of origin.

Just how many people are leaving is impossible to determine from government sources. No current figures are available, but a survey one year ago estimated 200,000 Israelis were living abroad — about six per cent of the population.

Officials admit that despite the economic pinch — which was expected to discourage Israelis from traveling — the number of requests for new passports after the war was equal to the corresponding period the previous year.

"We have had dozens and dozens of people asking for one-way tickets since the war," says Susan Pomerantz, manageress of a small travel agency.

Emigration is not new to Israel, but Mrs. Pomerantz said the number of people making plans with her agency to leave for "a long trip" or for good has substantially increased since the war.

Mrs. Pomeranrz said many of her customers were new immigrants from the United States and the Soviet Union. From random conversation, however, it appears that Israel also may be faced with its greatest exodus of native sons since the economic recession of the mid-1960s.

A fairly well-paid Israeli brings home about 1,600 Israeli pounds monthly, or about $380. A family of four needs half that for food and housekeeping — not counting the rent or mortage payment. If he owns a car, he may spend another quarter of his salary on gasoline, which costs $1.53 a gallon. The car license costs more than $100 a year, and insurance payments may be $350 or more.

"I'm afraid to start anything permanent here," said Newman, who wants to go into business for himself.

"A lot of businessmen were destroyed by the last war. Who watched their shops and their restaurants for them while they were in the army for five months?"

For Newman, the decisive factor is the war situation. Like most Israeli men, he serves at least one month annually in the reserves. As a medic, he was in heavy fighting on the Egyptian front in both the 1967 and the 1973 wars.

"Why should my children grow up in an environment of constant danger? I can't believe the fighting is over or that we will have peace with the Arabs," Newman said.

Many Israelis, including Newman, say they are fed up with the aging leadership of the Labor party which haf been in power all of Israel's 25 years as a state.

In Israel, which was built by immigrants and where the official policy is to gather all the Jews in the world within its borders, leaving the country is almost considered a social crime.

Some of the hopeful emigrants obviously feel guilty. The name of Newman in this story, for example, is not his true name because he doesn't want his true identity published.

"Sure I feel badly — as if I were abandoning ship before it starts to sink." said one Canadian who came here five years ago. "But you only live once and you might as well enjoy it."

Jews Rounded UP

Moscow (AP) — A group of Jewish activists said that security police rounded up 70 Jews throughout the nation to prevent delivery of a petition protesting the government's emigration policies.

San Francisco Workers Told To Go Back To Jobs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge ordered striking city employes back to work on Tuesday and told police to arrest all pickets. The mayor said officers would act only in the case of violence, however, and there was no sign of a letup in the six-day walkout.

The strike has paralyzed public transit and closed treatment plants, causing tons of raw sewage to pour into the bay.

Police said they would not act against the strikers until picketers were identified, notified and ordered arrested by a judge.

"We are not going to arrest peaceful pickets," said Mayor Joseph Alioto. "Any picket who engages in violence will be arrested . . . The court's order is not going to solve any strike.

"I don't want anybody to get any false hopes about the court's ability to deal with the strike. Only one thing will get this strike settled — to get both parties back together and stop the outrageous pollution of the bay."

The strike's effect has been intensified by the refusal of non-striking union members to cross picket lines deployed against nonstruck services, including transit and sewage treatment facilities. Police and fire operations have been maintained.

Commuters have been forced back into their cars because buses, trolleys and cable cars are not running. Children have been shivering in schools because janitors are on strike. Routine hospital services have been curtailed for lack of attendants.

In Sacramento, Gov. Ronald Reagan said the state would take over the four sewage plants if their raw discharge generates a public health threat.

Superior Court Judge Clayton Horn issued a temporary restraining order with direct instructions to police to arrest pickets. Acting in a $1 billion suit filed by the Chamber of Commerce, he also directed that the city government take legal action to halt the strike.

John F. Crowley, secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council and chief union negotiator, said there would be no formal comment until the order is served and studied by attorneys.

"I don't think it's a valid order," said Victor Van Bourg, attorney for four striking Service Employes International Union locals claiming 10,000 members. The workers walked out last Thursday, demanding a $16 million a year pay boost and dental care. They rejected the city's latest $8.5 million offer early Tuesday.

Van Bourg said there is no way anyone can be forced to go back to work. "There are a number of things about people's rights that simply can't be stopped by telling police to arrest people," he said.

Horn's order barred picketing at all city facilities, including the Municipal Railway, the Bay Area Rapid Transit District, the San Francisco International Airport.

It did not apply to 2,500 public school teachers striking separately against the Board of Education for higher pay.

Mid-State Project 'Beneficial' To Wildlife

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Wildlife would be better off with construction of the Mid-State Reclamation project than without it, the Grand Island chapter of the Izaak Walton League was told here Tuesday night.

Planners of the federal irrigation proposal "firmly believe with the expertize they have that (birds) would have a better chance with Mid-State than without it," said Bob Lowry of Cairo, Mid-State district president.

Lowry and two other project spokesmen appeared at the Ike's monthly meeting in an attempt to allay the outdoormen's concern about wildlife habitat loss.

The chapter recently voiced public opposition to Mid-State on the grounds that the project would dry up crucial river and wetlands habitat by diverting water from the Platte for irrigation. Similar concerns have been raised by the Aubudon Society and the federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

An article by chapter secretary Earl Boersen in a February issue of the national organization's official publication contended the Mid-State plan would "dramatically alter one of North America's premier resting and feeding areas for Sandhill crane, waterfowl, whooping cranes and bald eagles."

Lowry said Mid-State is "not anti-bird," observing that five of six proposed irrigation reservoirs would "lend themselves outstandingly to recreation, wildlife and fishing."

Unlike the Sherman Reservoir near Loup City, which experiences a drastic drawdown and resulting mudflats each irrigation season, the five Mid-State reservoirs would have only a four-foot drawdown, said project engineer-manager Darrell B. McOstrich.

On the other hand, Izaak chapter board member Dick Bartz contended that if Sandhill cranes were to lose the Platte River and associated wetlands, "it is probable that they would become a rare or endangered species."

While McOstrich stressed that there will be return flow of project water to the Platte, Gibbon irrigator Mark Bolin raised the possibility that water would instead be lost to the Loup system to the north. The Loup River flows 100 feet lower than the Platte, he said.

Commented Lowry: "Assuming the Bureau of Reclamation (project co-sponsor with the Mid-State district) knows what they're doing, we would have to come to the point where it will all balance out." He said groundwater losses would be reversed and the Platte would retain adequate flow during normal weather conditions.

Plattsmouth Voters OK Bond Issue

Lincoln Star Special

Plattsmouth — Voters in Plattsmouth in a special election Tuesday gave approval to a $2,800,000 school bond issue by an unofficial vote of 972 for and 529 against. There are 35 absentee ballots to be counted later.

Funds will be used for construction of a new senior high school, including a new gymnasium, auditorium and a cafeteria. The structure will provide facilities for grades 9 through 12.

Plans call for the current high school to be turned into an elementary school.

A similar bond issue was rejected in 1969.

Pistol Mishap Fatal To Youth

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP)—Sixteen-year-old Jimmy Joe Bailey of Council Bluffs died in a hospital Tuesday of a wound suffered in an accidental shooting last Thursday.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Bailey.

Witnesses told police the boy shot himself in the temple with a small-caliber pistol as he and three other youths were "just kidding around" at the Bailey home.

Survivors include the parents, a brother, two sisters and grandparents.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at Cutler Chapel.

Skier Bares All On Slalom Streak

By The Associated Press

Getting there is more than half the fun for today's streakers.

Lady Godiva had to rely on a horse. But modern-day nude dashers are speeding about on everything from skis to snowmobiles.

Ski enthusiasts in Michigan and New York were recently treated to the sight of a sort of slalom streak. A young man wearing only goggles, boots and skis sped down the Snow Ridge Ski Center slope at Turin, N.Y., apparently oblivious to the 25-degree temperature.

A Madison, Wis., man streaked down a hill during the Midwest Exhibition Skiing Championsips at Indianhead Mountain, Mich., over the weekend. He wore skis and had a shirt tied around his neck.

The man was identified as Bob Morrow, described by a friend as a "shy guy who never did anything out of the ordinary."

In Missoula, Mont., a nude man in cap, goggles, boots and skis joined a jumping contest.

A Utah State University student used a parakite — a sort of combination kite and parachute — for his steak down a ski run near Logan, Utah. Jan Peterson, who wore skis for the land portion of the streak, said he stored his lochtes in the trees.

Canadian hockey fans have had their share of streaking too. First it was Gary Murphy, a member of the Pickering Panthers, a teen-age team, who won a $40 bet by taking a turn around the Memorial Arena in Belleville, Ont., after a game.

The commander of a British Royal Air Force reconnaissance plane whose crew is on maneuvers at the Naval Air Station in Jacksonville, Fla., reported what may be the first streak on a military aircraft.

Capt. Peter Davidson, the commander of the plane, said crewman Robert Graham ran from one end of the plane to the other Tuesday while the craft was flying at 39,100 feet. Graham wore only flight boots and a life jacket.

"It was shocking," Davidson said. "But the people at home would get a laugh out of it."

At least two civilian airplane streaks have been reported — one aboard a flight from Cleveland to Denver last week, another on a Pan American World Airways flight to London on Saturday. One young man streaked to earth dangling from a parachute.

Irish Sen. Billy Fox was found slain Tuesday near the house from which he was abducted Monday by armed raiders, Irish police said.

Nixon Health Bill Criticized

Washington (UPI) — Officials of two groups which have studied rising health costs said Tuesday President Nixon's health insurance legislation often would leave the elderly worse off than they are now.

For example, under Nixon's bill, a patient over 65 would have to pay $342 from his own pocket for the average hospitalization of 12 days, compared to the $84 total he now pays under Medicare, said Melvin A. Glasser, director of the United Auto Workers' Social Security department.

The Nixon bill's solution to the tendency of doctors to send Medicare patients to the hospital too often is to "make the hospital care so costly to patients that they will plead with their doctors not to commit them to the hospital except in cases of urgent need," said Nelson H. Cruikshank, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

Both testified at the first congressional hearing on Nixon's comprehensive health insurance plan, conducted by a Senate subcommittee on aging.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, subcommittee chairman, made public new figures revealing that Medicare health insurance for the elderly last year paid only 40.3% of the health costs of persons over 65 — down from a peak of 45.5% in 1969.

In a related development, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., a former HEW secretary, introduced a bill to broaden Medicare coverage so patients would have to pay only nominal fees for most health and hospital costs.

Tax Check-Off Proposal For Political Funds Nixed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday rejected a proposed $1 check-off plan for political party contributions tied to the state income tax system.

Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha offered the suggestion as an amendment to a pending campaign financing bill, but lawmakers turned down the idea on a 15-25 vote.

Fellman also attempted to wipe out the proposed $1,000 limit on campaign contributions contained in LB877, but that effort was rejected on an 11-19 count.

Earlier, Fellman won 28-1 consent to amend LB614 to propose a $50 limit on cash contributions to political campaigns.

That bill, introduced by Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, originally would have banned all cash contributions.

The $1 voluntary check-off system would have been patterned after the federal check-off plan now written into Internal Revenue Service forms.

A taxpayer could, if he or she chose, earmark $1 of income tax payment for delivery to either the Republican or Democratic Party.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha objected to "using tax money to support political parties," and Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa said the plan amounted to "putting the parties on welfare."

Sen. J. James Waldron of North Platte noted that the IRS plan earmarks the fund only for presidential campaigns, whereas the Fellman proposal would hand money to the state political parties without any restriction on its use.

Fellman said the proposed $1,000 contribution limit contained in LB877 would "effectively limit participation" by some segments of society, including churches and labor unions which usually pool funds and distribute them in one large contribution.

The AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE) has been particularly concerned by the limit.

Labor unions cannot directly contribute political funds, but they pool the contributions of union members into a COPE fund for distribution to endorsed candidates.

Chambers said a limit would be ineffecitve since unethical persons can "always find a way around it."

LB877, which was sponsored by Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly to tighten up the corrupt election practices act of 1973, was held for later consideration of an amendment proposed by Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff.

The Carpenter amendment, which appears to closely match a bill proposed by Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, would require all campaign contributions and expenditures to be channeled through a single bank checking account.

That, Carpenter said, would result in "full discolusre" of campaign financing.

The Kelly bill, LB677, was killed on a 22-20 vote later in the day.

Sen. Kelly's Campaign Bank Account Measure Is Rejected

By United Press International

The Legislature, by a narrow margin, killed a bill Tuesday afternoon which would have required political candidates to have one bank account through which all contributions and payments were to be channeled.

The bill, LB677, was sponsored by Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island and was killed on a 22-20 vote.

However, even though the measure was killed, its basic concept is still alive in the form of proposed amendments offered by Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff during the morning session to LB877.

Carpenter asked Kelly to hold off action on his bill until the other bill was considered. It is scheduled to come up for debate Wednesday.

But Kelly declined and after amendments were rejected, Sen. George Syas of Omaha offered the kill motion saying the Kelly bill was unworkable.

Kelly said the only purpose behind the measure was a complete accounting of finances which would be available to the public. He said it would be up to the voters to decide whether the candidate handled his finances properly.

Sen. Gary Anderson of Axtell said he felt the measure had some merit and opposed the kill motion.

Anderson said in his opinion the Kelly idea was the "only idea that does have a chance of working" when it comes to finding out whether campaign finances are being handled properly.

He said if the bill had any fault, it was that "it is too good of an idea."

Syas, however, contended the result of such a bill was to force a person to set up a bank account "whether he needs it or wants it."

He also said "to require me not to use cash is crazy."

Child Support Bill's Legality Questioned

By United Press International

The attorney general's office held Tuesday a proposal to allow for revocation of a drivers license for failure to make child support payments would be questionable.

"It is our opinion tht the bill, if passed and tested in the courts, could have difficulty passing the requirements of the equal protection clause" of the constitution, for one thing, said James Duggan, assistant attorney general.

The opinion was requested on LB957, sponsored by Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, by an opponent of the bill, Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha.

Duggan said it appeared there could be a strong argument that the bill "is an unreasonable classification and involves discrimination on a matter . . . which has nothing to do with the intent of the legislation, the payment of child support."

"It is difficult to equat the two, the attorney said, referring to child support payments and driving.

He also said there is a question on the delegation of powers to an executive branchof government, the State Motor Vehicles Department, under such circumstances.

Therefore, Duggan concluded, "it is our opinion that this bill, if passed, would have a difficult time meeting constitutional requirements."

Funds For 55 State Agencies Receive First Round Approval

By United Press International

The Legislature gave first round approval Tuesday to a $33.9 million state general fund budget bill which would provide operating money for about 55 so-called minor agencies of state government.

Before the lawmakers advanced the bill, however, they adopted an amendment to provide $1 million for groundwater management programs and a promise of another $1 million during the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The amendment was put together by Sens. Maurice Kremer of Aurora and Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff.

Termed Investment

"What we're doing here today is not an expenditure," Kremer said in asking adoption of the amendment. "It is an investment."

The Kremer-Carpenter amendment was adopted on a 25-1 vote and the bill was then advanced over its first floor hurdle on a 29-0 vote.

Originally, Kremer asked that no appropriation be made for next year but that $1 million be promised the following year. Carpenter disagreed with that approach and asked that a $1 million firm appropriation be made this coming year.

"This state needs to tell agriculture we're in your corner," Carpenter said.

Groundwater Supplies

The money would be used specifically to pay for projects designed to protect Nebraska's groundwater supplies, which some contend are diminishing to the point that irrigation would have to be curtailed or at least controlled.

Kremer said not only did the action represent an investment, but it is an investment which would yield an immediate return in sales taxes.

The senator said there have been 1,500 farm irrigation systems sold in the state for installation this year. The sales taxes from those sales would run over $1 million and Kremer said that doesn't take into account greater crop yields.

Liquor Costs Equalization Measure Survives Attack

By The Associated Press

A bill to equalize liquor costs to retailers and establish a minimum 15% markup on liquor at retail survived another kill attempt Tuesday.

Sen. Richard Proud of Omaha launched the new assault on the measure, Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter's LB616, but failed on a 16-20 vote. Another kill attempt Monday by Sen. Duke Snyder of Omaha fell short 14-30.

The bill establishes a uniform $1.50 per case service charge on liquor in lieu of freight charges, thus equalizing costs to retailers from one end of the state to the other. It also prohibits selling or advertising at a price below whole sale cost and service charge plus 15%.

Sen. Proud said the bill is going to raise liquor prices to the customer. "This bill is against the public interest and it will haunt you and haunt you," he said.

Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha contended the bill obviously is unconstitutional.

Carpenter, defending the bill, attributed opposition to the bill to the Omaha World-Herald and its principal owner, Peter Kiewit.

Several senators arose to discuss monopoly in the liquor business, and whether there now is monopoly.

"If anybody's for a monopoly now, it's the public on the right to buy liquor at the cheapest price," said Sen. Proud.

The kill try having failed, Sen. Snyder sought to remove from the bill the provisions for the $1.50 service charge, but this proposal fell short 10-13.

Carpenter accused Snyder of "picking on a cripple." Carpenter said he expects Gov. J. James Exon to veto the bill.

Export Tax On Bananas Is Approved

Panama City (AP) — The price of bananas in the United States may go up slightly as a result of an export tax agreed upon this week by seven Latin American banana-exporting countreis.

Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama agreed in a four-day cabinet-level conference here that F.O.B. export prices should be raised "by a sum that will vary between one and two cents" a pound.

The tax would be applied to exports destined for the "traditional market" the United States, Canada and some parts of Europe.

The export levy was expected to improve the balance of payments of the seven countries by 160 million dollars yearly.

Legislature Backs Away From Top Power Battle

. . . Debate Delayed Until Monday

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A reluctant Legislature Tuesday backed away from the major public power battle of the current session.

Lawmakers agreed on a 28-0 vote to delay the scheduled debate until next Monday, giving them time to study proposed amendments to the bill in dispute.

The proposal, LB656, authorizing municipalities and other electric utilities to jointly construct transmission lines and generation facilities, has divided the public power industry into warring camps.

"Look at the watchdogs," Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff proclaimed, pointing to a legislative balcony holding power lobbyists.

"You'll notice they're sitting rather far apart," he noted.

Carpenter has proposed five pages of amendments which would give the Nebraska Power Review Board new authority to review electric rates and public power district construction contracts, and make the Legislative Council executive board an overseer in all power matters.

Already adopted by the Legislature was a Public Works Committee amendment, sponsored by Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook, which would give the Power Board the authority to resolve disputes over transmission wheeling arrangements, including rates.

LB656 is supported by the Omaha Public Power District, the Lincoln Electric System and a majority of the municipalities which operate their own electric utilities.

Opposing the bill, in its present form, are NPPD, rural districts and a League of Nebraska Municipalities minority.

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha, who introduced the bill, said it is needed to allow OPPD to enter into any joint venture for the construction of generation facilities.

Opponents are fearful that the bill would authorize joint transmission construction which could lead to a fragmentation of the present NPPD transmission system, resulting in increased costs for NPPD customers.

Carpenter warned that the utilities may be engaging in "an old trick . . . cutting each other up in the hope of being left alone."

In reality, he said, "they want the status quo."

Under Carpenter's amendments, the executive board would meet at least every three months for a briefing on all power district activities, including proposed rate increases.

The Power Board would be empowered to review all construction contracts exceeding $500,000, and to resolve disputes over construction of transmission facilities.

Carpenter said he also wants the Legislature to write "some guidelines" for establishment of electric rates, and authorize the Power Board "to verify whether the guidelines are followed."

Energy Crisis Bill Is Edged Forward

By United Press International

A bill to give the governor sweeping powers to react to the energy crisis gained conditional first round approval in the Legislature Tuesday afternoon.

The lawmakers voted 25-0 to send Sen. Terry Carpenter's LB685 over its first floor hurdle after rejecting an amendment suggested by Sens. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island and J. James Waldron of North Platte on a 21-2 vote.

The Kelly-Waldron amendment would have given the governor the power to suspend state taxes on diesel fuel. Opponents said that would be unconstitutional.

In advancing the bill, Carpenter said the idea would be to get it over on the final reading stage and hold it there.

"If conditions are worse by the time we are ready to adjourn (for the year), then we could act on the bill," Carpenter said, adding if there seemed to be no reason for the measure then it could die with adjournment.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, and others, questioned giving virtually unspecified authority to the governor unless it was absolutely necessary.

Carpenter said he felt that was a decision that would have to be made at the end of the session.

Licensing Of Electricians Voted Down

The Legislature voted 22-19 Tuesday to kill a bill which would have required the licensing of electricians across the state.

Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia offered the kill motion on LB870 saying "this just adds another fleet of cars and another fleet of inspectors" to state government.

The bill, however, may not be completely dead. Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha originally voted aginst the kill motion but at the last minute changed to the affirmative so he could request a reconsideration later.

Under legislative rules, only a person on the prevailing side of a question can request a reconsideration.

Panel Talk Set Friday

"Affirmative Action — Reverse Discrimination?" will be the topic of a panel discussion 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Friday at the Sheldon Art Gallery.

Kahn-Tineta Horn, an attorney and Mohawk Indian will be on the panel moderated by Barbara Coffey, Nebraska University systems' equal rights officer.

The discussion is sponsored by the Council of American Indian Students, the Student Bar Association, and the League of Women Voters of Lincoln-Lancaster County.

Garage Bill May Include Ballot Plan

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln Tuesday said the City of Lincoln's proposal for authority to use highway revenue funds to construct a downtown parking garage may include a provision for a vote of the people on the issue.

The Lincoln proposal will be aired before the Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee Wednesday at 1 p.m.

A pending bill, LB678, will be gutted to contain the city's plan, Barnett said.

The City of Omaha will also be included in the bill.

The proposal emerged as a result of a court decision knocking out the city's previous plan to undertake construction of a city bus terminal and parking facility with space included for retail shops.

ONODO . . . bows to picture of comrade, Cpl. Shimada.

Straggler Given Hero's Welcome

Tokyo (UPI) — Still the model Japanese soldier, Army Lt. Hiroo Cnoda flew home Tuesday from 29 years in the Phillippines jungle and bowed his way politely down a long line of high officials before greeting his aged and weeping parents.

The Japanese government gave a hero's welcome to Onoda, 52, who hid out on Lubang Island after the end of World War II, obeying orders never to surrender.

Onoda's ordeal ended Sunday when his wartime commanding officer went to Lubang and personally told him to give up and come home.

"I'm happy to have devoted the most important period of my life to what I believed in," Onoda said shortly after his arrival by special Japan Air Lines plane at Tokyo International Airport.

"My parents told me that you should do your best at any moment. I never thought of surrendering without orders."

The parents were at the airport to greet him — after Onoda spent several minutes working his way down a line of official welcomers.

The father, Tanejior Onoda, 86, shook his son's hand, then turned away and burst into tears.

The mother, Tamae, 88, had given Onoda a knife when he was posted to the Phillippines from Japan late in the war. At the time, she told him to use the knife on himself if he were ever in danger of capture.

She was in a wheelchair at the airport Tuesday. When her son took her hands, she tried to smile in welcome. Then she began to cry.

"What is important is whether Japan grows to be a great nation, not whether it won or lost the war," Onoda said later.

After the brief meeting with his parents, he was taken to a hotel for a news conference and then for a medical checkup to First National Hospital where he had the same room as Sgt. Shokichi Yokoi, who hid out 28 years on Guam from American forces until his capture in 1972.

When that is completed, Onoda will return to his home in Kainan, 300 miles southwest of Tokyo.

At his news conference, Onoda lost his composure only when asked if the death of his companion, Pvt. Kinshichi Kozuka, had influenced his decision to surrender. Kozuka was shot by Philippine police two years ago.

"Never! How can I think such a thing!" Onoda said sharply. "It just intensified my determination to avenge him."

S. Viet Police Accused Of Arresting 142 Monks

SAIGON (AP) — A militant Buddhist leader charged Tuesday that South Vietnamese police barged into a morning prayer service at his pagoda and arrested 142 monks.

The Buddhist leader, Thich Thien An, 34, of the militant An Quang faction, said he did not know why the arrests were made, but speculated they might be linked to an antigovernment demonstration he and about 20 other Buddhists held Monday in front of the Chi Hoa prison in Saigon.

In a letter to President Nguyen Van Thieu made available to newsmen, An said policemen "infiltrated" into the Khanh Ninh pagoda in Can Giuoc, 12 miles south of Saigon, and "herded" the monks away.

Government officials were not immediately available for comment.

An said he had gone to Saigon on Monday to visit more than 300 monks being held in the Chi Hoa prison who had been on a hunger strike to demand freedom. He said a protest demonstration developed after the group of monks was refused entry to the prison.

He said that among the monks participating in the prison hunger strike were 20 from his pagoda who have been in jail for three years for unknown reasons.

The Buddhist leader said the monks arrested Tuesday range in age from 14 to 50 years.

Doctor Develops Home Treatment that

RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS

HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES . . .

QUEEN HELENE MINT JULEP MASQUE 15 MINUTE HOME TREATMENT MUST SHOW IMMEDIATE IMPROVEMENT OR—YOUR MONEY BACK!

A leading New York Doctor, working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple home treatment that rinses away blackheads, helps dry up acne pimples, and shrinks enlarged pores. The name of this medicated product is QUEEN HELENE MINT JULEP MASQUE. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent called Argilla, dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like masque. You will now feel as though hundreds of "tiny fingers" are kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads, and other foreign impurities. As it firms and hardens, its suction action draws out waste matter from the pores. . . In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your wash cloth. And your skin feels clean . . . really clean . . . refreshed, smooth like velvet. Women 35 and over will enjoy the skin tightening experience as the masque relaxes tired facial muscles and eases tension lines on face and throat. If you suffer the agony of blackheads, acne-pimples, and enlarged pores, give yourself this home treatment and see the breath-taking results. Ask for it by name, QUEEN HELENE MINT JULEP MASQUE.

Omaha Budget Efforts Hampered By Inflation

Omaha (AP) — Bill Kranda, an aide to Mayor Edward Zorinsky, said the inflationary situation is hampering Omaha efforts to stay within the budget.

Kranda said costs of fuels have soared to record levels. At present rates of buying gasoline and petroleum, Kranda said, city officials figure a minimum in 1974 of 70% above the cost of fuels last year.

He said prices at present are averaging 88 to 90% above last year, and if there are no supplemental appropriations and no price break by December, the city will be 45 to 50% short on its fuel budget.

Kranda said the city must determine what projects it is committed to definitely and proceed with them, taking a critical look at starting new high cost programs.

To add to the problem, Kranda said, road user revenues from the state are down $120,000 and this money could be used to purchase fuel for the city.

The road user funds are down due to decreased purchases of gasoline, which stem from the shortage.

Kranda said also that socalled surplus funds are diminishing due to inflation.

Shot Could Replace Pill

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A birth control shot given to women once every three months is gaining popularity in some test clinics here and its supporters predict it could replace the pill if approved for general use.

The drug, called Depo Provera, is being investigated by the federal Food and Drug Administration, and the agency is reportedly ready to decide this spring whether the shots should be put on the market.

If approved, however, authorities expect Depo Provera to be licensed with restrictions such as limiting its use to women who can't or won't use other means of contraception. Doctors also would be required to warn women of possible temporary or permanent sterility should they plan to have children after using the drug.

Doctors who have used Depo Provera on patients in the Los Angeles area say it could become the most popular contraceptive.

"I have no reservations about Depo Provera," said Dr. Edgar A. Guess Jr., a private practitioner who has two clinics using the shots. "I advocate it. It is the Cadillac of contraception."

The drug is not without controversy, however. Opposing doctors warn it causes menstrual irregularity and sterility and cite a test which showed that beagle dogs injected with massive doses developed breast cancer. Proponents argue that beagles are highly cancer prone, and no other animal injected developed cancer.

The Upjohn Co., which has exclusive rights to market Depo Provera, says the shots have been tested on 3,857 women in the United States in controlled studies which show no side effects. An Upjohn spokesman said 500,000 women in 80 countries currently are using Depo Provera.

"We have women in their ninth year of using the drug and no cancerous effects have been observed," the spokesman said.

Upjohn conducted the original tests which showed that beagles can develop cancer when given a dose 25 times greater than the human dose.

The company spokesman said, "The Food and Drug Administration realized this and asked us to test monkeys as well.

Women taking Depo Provera at clinics now must sign a consent form saying they know that one test cuased cancer in dogs and "it is not known whether similar cancers will grow in my breasts . . ."

Dr. Edward Tyler, director of the Family Planning Centers of Greater Los Angeles, says the shots have been used on 500 women there since 1965 and not a single case of cancer or an unwanted pregnancy has resulted.

"To tell the truth as you see it, incidentally, is not necessarily the truth. To tell the truth as someone else sees it is, to me, much more important and enlightening. Soviet Exile Solzhenitsyn Will Live In Switzerland

BERN, Switzerland (AP) - Alexander Solzhenitsyn has chosen neutral Switzerland as his new permanent home in the West and expects his family to join him before the middle of next week, the Swiss Justice Ministry announced Tuesday.

The ministry said the Nobel laureate will make a formal request for political asylum and plans on settling in Zurich, Switzerland's most populous city.

Justice Minister Kurt Fugler had already stated earlier that such a request for asylum will be granted.

An official communique said the Swiss Embassy in Moscow was instructed to issue entry visas to the author's wife, Natalya Svetlova; her mother; her son by her first marriage, and her three children by Solzhenitsyn.

The ministry said they were likely to arrive between "March 15-20." Unofficial sources said the family planned to fly here directly from Moscow early next week.

The request for entry visas was made after Solzhenitsyn had been in repeated telephone contact with his wife in Moscow.

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn has been given assurances by Soviet authorities that the author's archives would be swiftly shipped to the West.

The decision ended weeks of indecision following his banishment from the Soviet Union on Feb. 14.

Drug Firm Looking For 3 Mislabeled Syringes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Detroit drug company is launching a nationwide search for three mislabeled hypodermic syringes which could accidentally cause abortion or premature birth in a pregnant patient, the FDA announced Tuesday.

The agency said that Parke Davis & Co., is recalling 48,470 syringes which were distributed to 400 hospitals and four wholesale drug firms.

The syringes contain Pitocin, a powerful hormone used to contract a mother's uterus following delivery of a baby, but four have been mislabeled as containing the flu vaccine Fluogen, the FDA said.

Administration of Pitocin rather than the flu vaccine could aggravate vascular disease in a chronically ill or elderly patient as well as premature birth in an expectant mother, the FDA said.

One incorrectly labeled syringe was discovered at the University Hospital of Birmingham, Ala.

All of the syringes involved in the recall are identical except that the Piticcin containers have gray plastic stoppers and the flu vaccine syringes have pink stoppers.

A Parke Davis spokesman said the recall involved 4,500 cartons containing 10 syringes each. They were distributed last fall.

"The company feels the potential hazard is minimal because only one syringe has been found to be mislabeled, coupled with the fact that the involvednlot of Pitocin has been on the market for six months without any additional reports of mislabeling," the spokesman said.

In early February I took my microwave oven into Sears for service. On Feb. 23 I got a call that it would take another two or three weeks. Can you find out the problem with Sears' Service Department?

—James B. McManamon, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: No problem at all, according to Dick Johnson at the Sears Service Center. He says when you brought the oven in on Feb. 8 you were told parts would have to be ordered. He said you indicated you were satisfied, when told the repair would be completed by March 5. He says it was done by that time.

What are the possibilities of having Elvis Presley perform at Pershing Auditorium?

—Gary Cooper, Milford

ACTION LINE: The possibilities are almost nonexistent unless he owes you a favor. Elvis is at the top of the entertainment business heap and generally plays only kingsize engagements.

For instance, he attracted 101,500 paying customers to the International Hotel in Las Vegas during a month-long stand there in August, 1969. He was reportedly paid an even million dollars, plus on-the-house treatment by the hotel for his efforts. In 1970, 207,494 fans turned out for six performances at the Houston Astrodome. Elvis reportedly walked away with $1.2 million, thanks to a contract that called for a guarantee of $100,000 a show plus a large percentage of the gate receipts.

By comparison, Pershing Auditorium manager Ike Hoig said the local facility can accommodate only 7,600 patrons at one time.

Hoig mentioned, however, that Elvis is taking a five-city southern tour in March, apparently as a favor to people who helped him when he was on his way up. Top price for a ticket to the Monroe, La. show was only $10. The promoters used no paid advertising but still sold out 36,000 tickets by mail order in 48 hours.

U.S. Is Studying Europe's Reply

Brussels (UPI) — The European Common Market nations have met U.S. calls for a "New Atlantic Charter" with a document saying Europe and the United States must cooperate as equals but not as partners, European sources said Tuesday.

The sources made available the text of a secret draft of an "Atlantic Declaration of Principles," drawn up by the nine Common Market nations and given to the United States when U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger visited Brussels March 4.

The draft is under study in Washington now. Kissinger has said that if it is approved, President Nixon may come here next month to sign it.

A meeting between U.S. and European officials to discuss the draft, set for Bonn this week, was postponed by Washington. The United States said it needed more time to study the paper, but European diplomats attributed the delay to American anger at European policy in general.

The draft itself seemed to meet Kissinger's insistence on a set of broad principles giving priority to the Atlantic Alliance and recognizing the need for continued close ties and cooperation between the United States and Europe.

But in one noticeable omission, the Europeans rejected the American hope that the relationship would be described as a "partnership." France in particularl objected to this word and it did not appear in the text. Instead, it said relations must "develop on an equal basis."

A Kissinger speech last April calling for a "New Atlantic Charter" to redefine U.S.-European relations touched off an acrimonious year of negotiations over the text. Kissinger vetoed one European draft as too long and legalistic, and American officials have said that the dickering and bad blood which the document produced robbed it or much of its value.

According to the text, the Europeans said it was "natural to define their relations first with the United States." Both sides "remain closely linked," it said, and must "intesify their existing cooperation and consulation by using to the full all the means which are at their disposal."

Although most of the text dealt with general items, it specified particular need for cooperation in monetary reform, energy, anti-inflation policies, international investment, science, technology and environment. Any energy cooperation, it said, should "comprise all the countries concerned" — meaning not only France but the Arab nations.

A second document, dealing with military and security affairs, is being drawn up within NATO.

Pompidou Talks With Brezhnev

PITSUNDA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The French-Soviet minisummit got under way Tuesday night in "an atmosphere of friendship and mutual esteem" but was limited to generalities, spokesmen for both sides said.

After a three-hour session between Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and French President Georges Pompidou, Brezhnev called the discussions "frank and constructive," according to Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin.

Pompidou, said Elysee Palace spokesman Xavier Marchetti, told Brezhnev, "You are in the East. We are in the extreme West. One cannot imagine stability in Europe where understanding between our two countries does not figure as an element of the first order."

Brezhnev was satisfied that the previous trend toward friendly cooperation between France and the Soviet Union "has been maintained in its entirety," Zamyatin said.

Both spokesmen said the discussions, which included top advisers on both sides, were limited to generalities but included Franco-Soviet trade, the European security conference and the Geneva conference on the Middle East, to which France has not been invited.

Brezhnev and Pompidou did not go into details on the matters.

A French reporter asked if France had inquired why it had not been consulted about the October Middle East war.

Marchetti replied, "No explanation was asked by France."

In a joint statement, the two leaders said the "exchange of views" dealt with "ways of deepening relations and further cooperation between France and the Soviet Union."

The spokesmen said there was no discussion on United States-French relationships or Soviet-China dealings.

Tuesday's talks included French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko as well as ambassadors.

Priests In Ethiopia Threaten To Strike

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia's 200,000 priests threatened Tuesday to go on strike for more pay.

The priests' demands followed two weeks of strikes and demonstrations by servicemen and workers for higher pay. The nationwide disorders toppled the previous government and forced Emperor Haile Selassie to promise pay raises for the military, minimum wages and price controls.

The spread of militancy in the ranks of the highly conservative Ethiopian state church raised the prospect of no baptisms, funerals or marriages for 10 million devout Christians.

The Ethiopian radio said 500 priests asked for a raise in a petition presented to Patriarch Theophilus at Trinity Cathedral in Addis Ababa. The priests also asked for pensions and a 50 per cent discount at hospitals.

The priests said they represented clergy throughout the country. Their petition gave the patriarch three days to reply. After that, it said they would take their complaints to Prime Minister Endalkachew Makonnen.

If he, too, failed to meet their demands, the petition said, the priests would strike.

The broadcast said Theophilus promised to answer the petition.

The church, one of the country's richest organizations, owns more than 20 per cent of Ethiopia's farmland. Priests presently earn about $7.50 a month, plus food and lodging given by parishioners.

Earlier Tuesday the military mutiny spread to Ethiopia's air force. Sources said some of the country's 3,500 airmen refused to work because they had not been granted pay raises along with soldiers and sailors.

ICCS Nearly Bankrupt

SAIGON (AP) — The international peacekeeping commission is on the edge of bankruptcy after nearly 14 months of observing a noisy cease-fire in South Vietnam, a senior commission official said Tuesday.

Assad K. Sadry of the Iranian delegation to the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision — ICCS — said the commission is about $1.7 million in debt.

He said the ICCS has submitted a revised budget of $28.5 million to the four signatories of the Paris agreement, but has received no replies.

"Within two more weeks, if we don't get any money, we will be completely in the red," he said.

The commission, composed of Iran, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland, has been living on advances from the signatories of the peace accord — the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong. The ICCS has never been granted a formal budget.

Girls' Basketball Given OK

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday approved establishment of a competitive basketball program for girls in the four senior high schools.

The vote followed Supt. John Prasch's recommendation to accept the report of a school-community committee which studied the matter. The committee urged creation of a 10-game schedule, beginning next year.

Prasch's recommendation, endorsed by board action, said the schedule would be limited to 10 games. Both varsity and junior varsity programs will be offered.

Prasch also told the board he will return later with recommendations on minimal degree of participation to warrant staffing competitive athletic programs for both boys and girls.

He noted that only two students reported last year for tennis at a junior high school, and he said low-degree of participation should be considered when staffing decisions are made.

'Participation' Urged

"We need also to insist on a degree of participation to insure that sports don't become too selective," he said.

The biggest problem to be faced next year, with the addition of girls basketball, will be in arranging for use of facilities.

-Prasch said he expected city recreation programs will "be the first to suffer" as the schools add new programs which will take gymnasium space.

In other matters, the board named Calvert Elementary School Principal Dean Webb as principal of the new Zeman School, scheduled to open next fall.

The new school will relieve crowded conditions at Calvert.

The board also approved previously announced attendance boundaries for Zeman, but left open the possibility that some students in outlying districts might be bused to the new school rather than to Calvert.

Parent Wallace Rudolph, who lives in the Pine Lake area, suggesteed students who would be bused to Calvert in the new attendance area should be bused to Zeman instead.

Rudolph said his request was based largely on the congested conditions that are found at Calvert at the end of the school day.

Although Rudolph urged changing attendance boundaries to accommodate the students from the outlying area at Zeman, Prasch urged approving the previously announced boundaries and considering the busing issue separately later this year.

Webb, 43, has been principal at Calvert since 1968. He was formerly superintendent of schools in Oshkosh, and he has taught at Calloway, Plainview and Alliance.

His successor at Calvert will be appointed in about a month.

UC Pact Okayed By Health Board

... For Nursing Students

By JIM DeCAMP
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln-Lancaster Health Board voted Tuesday night to sign an agreement with Union College to provide field and clinical experience for community health nursing students.

The college will send approximately 15 or 20 students into the program each semester. Students have been sent to Denver for field experience in the past.

The health department will provide facilities and supplies needed by the students and a conference room for use by the instructor and the students.

The one-year agreement is scheduled to begin June 1st.

In other action the board selected three members of the supervisory committee for the food ordinance. They are Sam Davidson, of Mr. B's IGA; Charles Wendelin, of Wendelin Baking Co.; and S. R. Haddal, manager of the Lincoln University Club and president of the Lincoln Restaurant Association.

The two members-at-large for the committee will be named at a later date.

The board also received a report on the establishment of a branch service office of the health department to serve residents in eight census tracts in the Near Northeast Side of the city.

The branch office will be staffed by five community health nurses and one secretary and will have back-up services at the main office.

Basic services will include screening clinics, home nursing care for the choronically ill and disabled who are homebound and clinical services for special conditions as immunications, tuberculosis, venereal disease, family planning, nutrition, and alcohol and drug abuse.

The total budget for new nursing and clercial staff, transportation and clinic operation will amount to $41,817.

In other action, the board agreed to enter into a memorandum of understanding with the State Health Department to help prevent duplication of effort between the agencies.

The department will have the responsibility of making evaluations in 12 areas including milk sanitation, day care homes, food sanitation, swimming pools and city and county jails.

The State Health Department will still issue all state licenses and permits and receive fees for them.

Awareness Plan Panel OKd

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday agreed to form a joint steering committee with members of Concerned Citizens for Truth in Education (CCTE) to review instructional materials and cultural awareness programs in the Lincoln School District.

Adnee Bradford, speaking for the CCTE curriculum task force, called the board's action "a step in the right direction," adding that while the two have some disagreements, "maybe we can reach a mutual understanding" through the new committee.

Board representation will include Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel; Edith Harvey, cultural awareness facilitator; Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction; Betty Dillon, staff development director, and Pearl Goldenstein, board member. The Five CCTE members are yet to be named.

Duties Described

The steering committee, to advise Supt. John Prasch, will:

—Review criticisms or objections about instructional materials, insuring they are appropriately processed.

—Identify new goals in cultural awareness.

—Assess the effectiveness of and participation in cultural awareness in-service programs for teachers.

—Monitor the school district's overall program for improved cultural awareness and report periodically to the Board of Education on program progress.

Prasch, in response to CCTE's requests presented at the board meeting last month, said Tuesday the Lincoln Public Schools "have no objection to the organization of community groups in local schools," as CCTE proposed.

Members of such groups, however, should be confined to the constituents of each local school and its staff, he recommended.

'Great Need'

CCTE cited "a great need for a system-wide reassessment of curriculum materials to realistically meet the needs of each student," to which Prasch agreed, noting that such a program is already in operation.

The superintendent disagreed with CCTE's request for a resource specialist in each school to coordinate cultural awareness program development, saying, "It is not economically feasible to add a staff member in each school as a resource specialist."

He said he believes it "reasonable," though, to identify in each school building a staff member with responsibilities for the program.

Prasch further agreed with CCTE that "in-service training should be a continuous process at the building level," involving school staff at all levels including those in service-related jobs, such as food service.

He took exception with the CCTE recommendation that Board of Education members take in-service training, saying they are elected officials already devoting time in a non-paid, voluntary role.

Action Program

In personnel recommendations, Prasch said the district has a strong affirmative action program to recruit and hire minority personnel from schools with a high percentage of minority group graduates.

But Prasch rejected CCTE's recommendation that "no teacher be hired by the Lincoln Public Schools without a minimum of six credit hours in the area of cutlural awareness."

He said the district desires a culturally aware staff, but said that attribute cannot automatically be attained by taking courses.

"We believe that there may be more promise in identifying awareness through more sophisticated interview or testing techniques," Prasch said, calling for a sampling of interviewing techniques to be brought to the committee.

To a CCTE proposal that teachers now in the system be required to take six hours of cultural awareness courses, Prasch responded, "We generally believe that a mandated course in awareness may be counter-productive to the intended goal."

'Long Way To Go'

Edith Harvey, cultural awarenss facilitator for Lincoln Public Schools, said there has been some progress in the programs, but "we have a long way to go."

She urged the board to "have the administrators take more of a leadership role" in encouraging cutlural awareness training.

"We are still mainly teaching multi-ethnic units" emphasizing black history, she said, while the district goal is to integrate minor studies.

Seven more schools will be added next year to the six target schools now teaching cutural awareness, Ms. Harvey said.

Board member Lou Roper asked if it would take five years to integrate ethnic study courses, and Ms. Harvey replied, "I would hope it wouldn't take that long."

14-Year Gas Station Lease Lost

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—An Omaha man who has operated a Sinclair station for nearly 14 years said Tuesday he has been notified the oil company is cancelling his lease.

Bob Curtit, 47, said he leases the station from Sinclair and the lease was up Feb. 28.

He said the company told him there would be no renewal and he was given 30 days to move out.

Curtit has a 19-year-old daughter living at home and operates the station with his son Bill, 26.

He said he has asked other oil companies if they need a station manager "but so far none of them wants to take someone else on."

His other alternative, Curtit said, is to go to work as a mechanic.

He said he had not expected the cancellation.

"We'd been getting 100 per cent of our 1972 allocation," he said. "We'd been selling between 22,000 and 28,000 gallons of gas a month all last year. I thought we'd built a heck of a business.

Some other Sinclair lessees in the area have received similar notifications.

The Sinclair regional manager in Kansas City, Kan., said he would not comment on the notifications.

In Lincoln, George Watters, director of Nebraska Petroleum Marketers Inc., said he had heard rumors that Sinclair was not renewing some station leases.

Watters said guidelines issued by the Federal Energy Office Jan. 28 said suppliers were required to supply all of their wholesale purchasers of record as of the base period, 1972.

He said service stations, in his estimation, should be considered wholesale purchasers and that the FEO regulation to him means that if an oil company supplied a station in 1972, it must do so in 1974.

Other operators who said they had received notice their leases would not be renewed include Don Brown, 30, who has a station in Council Bluffs, and Richard Blaha, 26, who operates in Bellevue.

AMA Hits Effort

Washington (AP) — The American Medical Association said the administration's attempt to extend economic controls over the health industry amounts to a blatant effort to restructure the nation's medical system.

NE High Addition Contracts Authorized, Others Put Off

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday authorized contracts prepared on bids for the addition to Northeast High School, but delayed taking action on the gymnasium floor and science equipment contracts.

The total of bids approved amounts to $2,616,260, according to Dr. John Lux, board chairman.

Discussion on the gym centered around whether the board should buy a wood floor or a poured synthetic substance for the basketball court.

Architect Lynn Vermeer of Bahr, Hanna, Vermeer and Haecker, recommended the synthetic floor, noting it would allow multiple sports uses, such as for indoor tennis.

Board members Williamette Shafer and T. E. Dewey spoke for the multiple-use concept, but Rudy Bauer, operations and maintenance director, explained that the synthetic surface would require more care than a wood floor.

Board member Lou Roper questioned the "track record" of the synthetic floor manufacturer, since the substance is "so new" to the market.

'Because It's Cheaper'

Supt. John Prasch recommended the board buy the wood floor "simply because it's cheaper," allowing a savings of about $5,000 over the synthetic floor.

In either case, the floor contract would include a vinyl asbestos tile for the wrestling area.

Prasch agreed, however, that the synthetic floor surface would allow more flexibility for use in the sports program.

The synthetic floor bid is for $69,128. No other gyms in Nebraska schools have such a floor, although Prasch said Exeter and Pawnee City High Schools will install similar ones this summer.

The board also decided to delay action on bids for science equipment, investigating a possible savings of $56,646.

The rest of Prasch's recommendations, which were pared down for substantial savings in materials costs, were accepted. However, the final cost of the contracts represents about $800,000 more than the board had projected a year ago.

In other action, the board authorized establishment of a nonprofit corporation, the Lincoln School District Leasing Corp., to acquire a new central computer system and terminals for all school buildings for instructional use over the next seven years.

Savings?

Dr. Bob Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business affairs, said the school district may be able to save $60,000 by using a third-party financing instrument.

Basic equipment costs will be approximately $600,000, Den Hartog said, with auxiliary equipment, staffing and related costs to bring the total to about $900,000 over the project period.

In authorizing the leasing corporation, the board said it wishes the funds to be available by May 1, with the cost of the loan to include all costs of incorporating and bond issuance.

The board also met in executive session to discuss personnel changes, and items for contract negotiations in a meeting next week with the Lincoln Education Association, bargaining agent for teachers.

The board will hold a formal hearing at 9 a.m. Tuesday to consider the case of Randy Fricke, Southeast High School teacher, who was not recommended for reappointment in the next school year.

Police Arrest Suspect In Beating And Robbery

A 28-year-old man has been arrested and another man is being sought in connection with the beating and robbery of an elderly janitor at the Sharp Building on March 2, police said Tuesday.

Police said the 28-year-old suspect had been in the city jail for an alleged parole violation since March 3.

A warrant will be issued Wednesday for the other man wanted in connection with the incident, according to police. That man, 34-years old is believed to have left the state.

The janitor, Albert Hatfield is listed in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital. He was found lying unconscious in an elevator in the Sharp Building by a doctor at 6:40 a.m. March 2.

Earlier Hatfield had been listed in serious condition.

Police said Hatfield was robbed of credit cards and an unknown amount of cash. The credit cards have been recovered, police said.

Demo Majority In Registrations Said At A Peak

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Douglas County Election Commissioner Mike Boyle said Tuesday the Democratic majority among registered voters in the county is at its highest "in quite a few years."

Boyle said there are about 103,000 registered Democrats, 76,000 registered Republicans and 10,000 registered independents.

Since he took the job 5½ years ago, Boyle said, the Democratic majority has increased from some 16,000 to its present 27,000.

Richardson Says Impeachment Looms

Pittsburgh, Pa. (AP) — Former U.S. Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson said Tuesday the possibility of impeachment had been heightened by President Nixon's "much too defensive" position on Watergate.

"Once I doubted the chances for impeachment, but now I would rate the odds 50-50," said Richardson, who resigned as attorney general after refusing to obey a Nixon directive to fire then-Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

3 More Arrested In Kidnap

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents arrested three men in Miami, Fla. Tuesday night, bringing to eight the number of persons charged in connection with the kidnaping of a young Dix Hills, N.Y., boy.

FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley identified the three as Roberto Emelio Martinez, 37; his brother Jorge Martinez, 28, and Jose Antonio Hernandez, 17, all Cuban-born residents of New Jersey.

They and the others were charged with conspiracy to violate the federal kidnaping statutes in the abduction of 8-year-old John Calzadilla last Wednesday.

The youngster was freed unharmed in New Jersey 31 hours later after his parents paid a $50,000 ransom.

Kelley said the Martinez brothers and Hernandez all were arrested in the vicinity of 261 NW First St., Miami, and were held for arraignment before a U.S. magistrate in that city.

The FBI said that it was still looking for the ransom money, but that it was not searching for any other persons in connection with the case.

Peron Replaces Ousted Governor With A Follower

©The New York Times

Buenos Aires — President Juan Domingo Peron has appointed one of his conservative followers to replace the deposed left-wing Peronist governor of the strife-torn industrial city of Cordoba.

The appointment of Diulio Danilo Brunello, a ranking member of the Ministry of Social Welfare, ended a two-week-old institutional crisis in Argentina's largest city that began when police rebels and rightwing trade unionists ousted the legally elected governor, Ricardo Obregon Cano.

The right-wing coup has brought a wave of bombings and gun battles in Cordoba, and has resulted in the deaths of at least eight people.

Wife's Incapacity To Consummate Marriage Cited

London (UPI) — A London divorce court has granted a nullity decree to a 92-year-old doctor of science on the grounds of his 24-year-old wife's incapacity to consummate the marriage.

Dr. Kenneth Turner married Yugoslav-born Branislava Ivancevic at Wandsworth Register Office in August 1972.

His attorney said they were living in the same home but in separate rooms.

Turner was an old friend of his bride's family and a widower at the time of the marriage.

"I am satisfied that the marriage was not consummated owing to the incapacity of the wife," Judge Eric Beresford said granting the decree.

Turner, an upright figure looking years younger than his age, declined to comment.

OK To Be Sought For SLA 'Soldiers' To Speak

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Attorneys for two imprisoned Symbionese Liberation Army "soldiers" said Tuesday they will ask permission for the men to make a televised statement on their plan to win the release of Patricia Hearst.

Attorneys James Jenner and William Gagen said they would make a motion Wednesday for the news conference before Superior Court Judge Sam Hall of Contra Costa County.

The prisoners, Joseph Remiro and Russell Little, last week demanded a nationally televised news conference to discuss their ideas for winning the release of the 20-year-old coed. The SLA claims she is being held as a "prisoner of war."

But Alameda County Sheriff Frank Madigan said Tuesday there was "no way" there would be a news conference in his jail, where the two are being held. He said the lawyers would have to secure a court order for the press conference.

Meanwhile, Patricia Hearst's fiance Steven Weed said he believed she was sincere in expressing doubts in a taped message last weekend about the efforts of her family to win her release.

AP

WEED . . . says Miss Hearst sincere.

Weed, who was beaten severely when Miss Hearst was abducted Feb. 4 from her Berkeley apartment, said: "I think she is starting to wonder if we are doing everything we can. The rhetoric isn't hers but she is very sincere about it."

In answer to reporters' questions, Weed said Miss Hearst did not have a hand in her own kidnaping and that neither he nor Miss Hearst was involved with the SLA or other radical groups.

"How do you convince somebody of something that's . . . an obvious fact?" he said. "All I can say is that we've been together constantly for the past two years and we know exactly what we do, what each of us thinks.

"I never have belonged to a radical organization." Weed said he had roomed with the chairman of the Students for a Democratic Society at Princeton and knew other radicals.

"But these people were friends of mine. I was in no way politically involved in the sense of being a member of any sort of organization," he said.

In the brief meeting with newsmen outside the Hearst mansion in suburban Hillsborough, Weed repeated an earlier promise that he would not testify against the kidnapers if she is released unharmed.

Remiro, 27, and Little, 24, are charged in the cyanide-bullet assassination of Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster last Nov. 6, a crime for which the SLA has claimed responsibility. They are also charged in Contra Costa with attempted murder in a shootout with a policeman Jan. 10.

The SLA said in a tape-recorded "communique" Saturday that all communication would be suspended until Remiro and Little are permitted to speak out on prison conditions.

The lawyers said they would ask that their clients be permitted to make a statement before a single television reporter. They said no questions would be permitted.

Gagen said Judge Hall would hold a hearing Wednesday on the request for the televised statement. "It was the judge's feeling that tentatively a press conference presented some real problems," he said.

Planning Family Can Save Money

NEW YORK (AP) — For every dollar spent, family planning programs financed by the federal government can produce $1.80 to $2.50 in savings the next year, Planned Parenthood Federation of America said Tuesday.

Most of the estimated savings, four-fifths, result from avoiding the costs of medical care in pregnancy, the organization said in a new study.

"There are few public education programs in the United States — and possibly none — that have the potential of saving a minimum of $2 in government expenditures in Year 2 for every dollar expended in Year 1," said Frederick S. Jaffe, author of the study.

The study by Jaffe, director of Planned Parenthood's center for family planning program development, was published in a population journal at a time Congress is considering renewal of legislation for financing of family planning research and services.

The Family Planning Services and Population Research Act of 1970 was extended for a year by the Public Health Service Amendments of 1973 and is now due to expire June 30 this year. Bills are in both houses of Congress now and while some sort of legislation is expected, the dollar amount is at question, a federation spokesman said.

Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, federation president, said family planning cases have more than doubled over the past three years with federal and private support, to 3.2 million patients in 1973. But Guttmacher said this is about half of those deemed in need of subsidized services by 1975, a goal set by the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

In his study, Jaffe said the findings are based on federal expenditures between 1967 and 1970; estimated births averted between 1968 and 1971, and savings to government from short-term expenditures for health and welfare that would have been made without birth controls.

Jaffe estimated the number of births averted by family planning programs in his study ranged from 496,000 to 707,000. The costs of first-year medical care and public assistance savings for each averted birth were estimated at $632, adjusted for various years.

Federal expenditures for family planning were estimated at $173.9 million between 1967 and 1970, assuming a one-year time lag between program expenditures and averted births. The savings to government between 1968 and 1971 were put at $304.5 million to $434 million, for a cost-ratio range of 1.8 to 1 to 2.5 to 1.

Jaffe said the estimates are probably below real numbers because a number of expenses were not included in the computation.

Pablo Picasso's Illegitimate Kids Ruled As Heirs

Grasse, France (UPI) — A court ruled Tuesday that Claude Ruiz Picasso, 26, and his sister, Paloma, are illegitimate offspring of the late Pablo Picasso, meaning that the two are guaranteed a portion of the Spanish painter's estate.

The plaintiffs, Picasso's children by his mistress Francoise Gilot, brought the suit for legal recognition of their status.

According to French law, illegitimate offspring as well as legitimate children are guaranteed a portion of a deceased parent's estate.

Court sources said Picasso's two other heirs, his widow, Jacqueline, and his 51-year-old son, Paulo, may appeal the decision.

Production has started on a $2,269 battery-powered two-seater car that travels at speeds up to 30 m.p.h. The Sebring, Fla., manufacturer says 50 cars should be ready for delivery by the end of March. The car can run about 50 miles on one charge at a cost of half a cent a mile, the company says.

Malnutrition Linked To Macrobiotic Diet

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — A group of University of Michigan researchers warns that babies fed Zen macrobiotic diets may develop malnutrition.

The warning is in a report in the March issue of Pediatrics, published by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The so-called Zen macrobiotic diets are popular among health-food faddists, especially the young.

The researchers said they made their study after two underweight infants admitted to a hospital were found to have been maintained primarily on macrobiotic diets.

The researchers, from the university's school of public health and department of pediatrics in Ann Arbor, are Drs. John R. K. Robson, J. E. Konlande, F. A. Larkin, P. A. O'Connor and Hsi-Yen Liu.

They pointed out that macrobiotic baby formulas are commercially available in health food stores and elsewhere. They include grains roasted and ground into a powder and diluted with water.

Analysis of the formulas, the researchers found, showed that neither the energy nor the protein intakes of the infants on macrobiotic diets met the daily recommended allowances set by government health authorities.

"If the present trend toward food faddism continues, an increasing number of young mothers may be expected to use macrobiotic diets for feeding their infants," they said.

And they added that these formulas pose "a real risk that the infant will suffer from protein-calorie deficiency."

Unless young mothers are educated about macrobiotic formulas and unless infants fed these formulas are kept under careful surveillance, they said, "there will be an increasing number of reports of infant undernutrition or malnutrition in the future, and its consequent effects on growth and development."

PASSENGER CAR TIRE GUARANTEE

Montgomery Ward guarantees each of its passenger car tires for a specified number of miles when used on passenger cars or station wagons, except taxis. If your tire does not give you this mileage because of:

- defects in material or workmanship,
- normal road hazard failure,
- premature tread wearout (2/32 inches or less remaining);

Montgomery Ward will:

1. During the first 10% of guaranteed mileage, replace the tire free.
2. During the remaining guaranteed mileage, replace it for a prorata charge based on mileage used.

Nail punctures repaired free during the entire guaranteed mileage.

For guarantee service and adjustments, return tire to any Montgomery Ward branch with the Guarantee Booklet issued at the time of sale.

Charge after first 10% of guaranteed mileage based on selling price in effect at the time of return at branch to which returned, including federal excise tax.

Passenger tires used on taxicabs, and motor vehicles other than passenger cars are guaranteed on the same basis against defects in materials and workmanship only.

Proper tire and suspension system maintenance are vital to obtaining maximum tire mileage. Montgomery Ward will therefore rotate your tires and inspect your suspension system free of charge every 5,000 miles, for the entire guaranteed mileage, at any of its retail or catalog branches having tire installation facilities. Wheel alignment and balance service available, at regular charge.

Upward Climb Halted

New York (AP) — Uncertainty over the future course of Arab oil policy knocked the stock market off its recent upward track Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had hit a 1974 closing high Monday, retreated 1.33 to 887.12, but gainers edged out losers 755 to 636 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume was a moderately active 17.25 million shares.

Brokers said Wall Street would be watching closely for developments at a meeting of Arab oil ministers scheduled for Wednesday in Tripoli. Hopes for an end to the four-month embargo on shipments to the United States have been cited as a major factor in the market's gains of the past few weeks.

Reports Tuesday that the Soviet Union was pressing for a continuation of the embargo were "a cloud overhanging the market," said Ralph Acampora at Harris, Upham & Co.

S. S. Kresge was the Big Board volume leader, rising ⅛ to 32½ after a 4⅝-point drop on Monday, when the large retailer reported per-share earnings barely increased in the fourth quarter of last year.

Among the other gainers were some of the volatile glamor issues which have been pounded hard over the past year.

MGIC Investment, an institutional favorite known as "Magic" on Wall Street, rose 2⅝ to 44⅝. Last year the stock peaked at a record price of 98⅞.

Airlines, chemicals and auto issues were generally lower on the Big Board, but most steels showed fractional gains.

At the American Stock Exchange, E-Systems gained 1 to 12⅛. The electronics company's directors approved a tender offer for 400,000 of its own shares at $13 each.

The Amex volume leader was Marinduque Mining Class B stock, up ½ at 4⅜ after a recent 5-for-4 split.

The Amex' market value index rose .21 to 100.15. The NYSE's index of all its listed common stocks rose .13 to 53.06.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite off .07 at 95.80.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 3-13

Bellevue's Leahy Recalls 'Carnival Atmosphere'

By Randy York
Prep Sports Writer

Ten years ago this weekend — when Creighton Prep defeated Bellevue in the state Class A basketball finals — the two schools' mascots staged one of the most spirited sideshows in Nebraska state tournament history.

"I remember that episode well. I was a junior at the university at the time," recalls Bellevue basketball coach Mike Leahy, who has guided the Chieftans to their second best basketball mark (16-5) in the school's history.

This year's record ranks only behind the 18-3 mark compiled 10 years ago when Bellevue's "Chieftan" mascot and Creighton Prep's Bluejay scrapped before the title game, featuring Prep's Wally Anderzunas and Bellevue's Dick Agnew.

"It started as a gimmick for the press," recalls Leahy. "They wanted the two mascots to pose next to each other for a friendly picture. The Chieftan carried it a step further and plucked the bill of the Bluejay with his hatchet.

"The Bluejay didn't like that very much," explains Leahy, "and he took a swing at the Chieftan. Before anyone could intervene, the two were pushing and shoving each other upside down. They scrapped harder and more furiously than the championship teams did."

John C. Johnson
Omaha Central

Leahy's uncle, Creighton Prep football coach and athletic director Don Leahy, finally intervened to help break up the pre-game pugilistics.

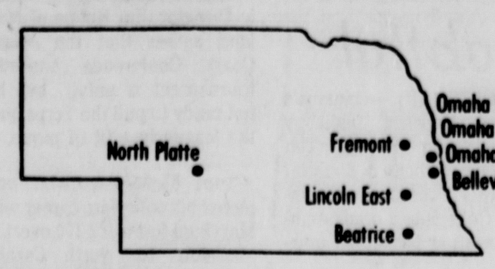
Three years ago, Bellevue entered the state carnival with an unimpressive 8-13 record. The Chieftans earned a Cinderella label when they upset then top-ranked Columbus in the first round before losing to eventual runnerup Papillion in the semifinals.

"We wanted a crack at Lincoln East three years ago, but Papillion (with Mike Heck) had too much height for us to handle," recalls Leahy.

The Bellevue coach is hoping to advance to this year's semifinals and a likely chance at East if both teams pass opening-round assignments Thursday.

"I think it would be a good matchup between Curt Hedberg (of East) and Greg Nagel (Bellevue's 6-7 center)," predicts Leahy.

A look at this year's Class A state tourney field includes:



Lincoln East (16-2)

Coach Paul Forch's Spartans' only two losses were inflicted in the early season (60-57) at second-ranked Omaha Central and in the late season by unranked Lincoln Southeast (also 60-57).

Six-eight all-state candidate Curt Hedberg, whose last-second shot gave East a 41-40 district final win over defending state champion Lincoln Northeast, keys the attack with a 20-point average.

All-city forward Mark Ahlquist ranks as one of the state's finest defensive players. Hoyt Nye, the other forward, is a capable offensive threat. Guards Jim Dennis and Karl Voss are quick, excellent defensive players and capable outside shooters when needed.

O. Central (19-3)

Two of Coach Jim Martin's three losses were to top-ranked Creighton Prep (51-45 in the Metro tourney finals in December and 49-48 in overtime two weeks ago). The other loss was 51-50 to Omaha Westside.

Guard Mike Ashford averages 16.5 points a game and 6-2½ junior forward John C. Johnson, an excellent jumper, averages 16 points.

Forwards Charles Lewis (11.8 scoring average) and Sylvester Pierce (10.4) also average in double scoring figures. Central's fifth starter, guard Clayton Bullard, became a regular in early February and is another maintaining a twin scoring figure average since that time.

Fremont (15-4)

Coach Al Bahe, in his 17th year as the Tiger head coach, is bringing his seventh team to the state tournament. He guided Fremont to the 1961 state Class A title.

This year's bid is keyed by all-state guard candidate Mic Higley (14-point average) and 6-2 senior Dan Mussmann, a forward with a 12.5 scoring average and an even better boardman.

Six-seven senior Randy Poeschl, a Nebraska football recruit, 5-11 junior Kevin Odenreider and 6-2 sophomore Greg Olson are Fremont's other starters. Bahe believes "we've got to play better defense. We've been too spasmodic lately."

Bellevue (16-5)

Nagel, the 6-7 center, is averaging 15.5 points and 12 rebounds a game. He grabbed a school record 25 rebounds earlier this season against Millard.

Six-five junior Tom Hall and 6-1 junior Rich Shefte each support 13.4-point averages. Shefte's older brother, Steve Shefte, played on Bellevue's 1964 state runnerup team.

Bellevue has beaten first-round foe Omaha North twice during the regular season — 69-60 in December and 65-58 in mid-February.

North Platte (13-6)

Height comes in abundance for coach Byron Loescher's West Big 10 Conference champions, which lost half of their games to Lincoln schools.

Bruce Kucera, a 6-8 junior center-forward, averaged 14.8 points as a sophomore and almost 17 this season.

The Bulldogs also have consistent shooters in their other two inside performers — 6-6 Dan Curtis (11-point average) and 6-7 Robert Von Behren (9-point average). Veterans Steve Gullion, Bret Brase and Rick English are the guards.

O. North (12-18)

Viking coach Bob Murray believes his 6-2 senior Nate Phillips is the best forward in the Metro Conference. Phillips averages 17.5 points a game.

Mic Higley
Fremont

Six-nine Mike Sealock, who was not eligible to play after transferring to North last season, and 5-9 guards Bennie Valentine and Roger Taylor each average between 10 and 12 points a game.

North upset season-long unbeaten Class A leader Creighton Prep, 37-34, to qualify for state tourney. In mid-December, North pressed Prep before losing 47-45 in overtime.

O. Burke (8-13)

The Bulldogs' fortunes dipped markedly in the first round of district competition when 6-3 George Andrews, a Nebraska football recruit, was lost for the season because of an eye injury. Andrews, who's still hospitalized, was Burke's leading rebounder and second leading scorer. His absence means that 6-5 Mark Hammang, 6-4 Barnie Cotton and 6-5 sophomore Mike Bruce must shoulder more rebounding responsiblity.

Coach John Johnette's leading scorers are former Lincolnite Rob Hayner (17-point average) and 3-year regular Rich Harman (11-point average).

Beatrice (7-13)

Coach Neil Nannen's Orangemen have won four of their last five games after losing to Lincoln Northeast, 48-46, Feb. 14 at Lincoln.

"The Northeast game restored our confidence and helped us gain some consistency," says Nannen, who guided Beatrice to its first state tourney berth in 14 years last season.

Ike's View

Norton: Legend Destroyer

There was nothing special about March 31, 1973, except the Muhammad Ali-Ken Norton fight on television. Outside the sun was shining and the paraphernalia for yard work leaned against the house along with bags of fertilizer and seed.

The only thing missing was the guy who was supposed to do the work. He was inside making sure the beer was iced and the pretzels and potatoe chips were available. After all, Ali was fighting and several cronies were due any minute for the fight. The heck with the yard; that could wait till the next day.

Just as Howard Cosell was warming up his lip with caustic, yet colorful remarks in that nasal baritone, in walked Robert Danley wearing his ever-present red polka-dotted cap and white T-shirt. He sauntered to his favorite chair and sprawled out within equal reaching distance of the pretzels, potatoe chips and beer.

"What round do you think he'll win in," he asked between the one-two-three rhythm. There was no doubt about which fighter he was refering to. Norton was a 5-1 underdog.

"Ali should handle him easily," I remarked and drew an instant response from the boy.

"I think the other guy will win, Dad," he said, and slurped noisily from his can of coke.

"Ahhhh, feed your face," I said. "What do you know about boxing?"

"Betcha a quarter."

"You're on." The fighters entered the ring. Ali was dancing and doing that classy shuffle. Norton stood quietly in his corner, every once-in-a-while shrugging his shoulders and rolling his head back-and-forth.

At the bell, Ali came out dancing just like he predicted in a machine gun staccato earlier on pre-fight film with Cosell. He had also predicted in poetic form the round in which Norton would fall.

Norton, however, didn't retreat. He met Ali head-on in the center of the ring and released a barrage that forced the former heavyweight champion back.

Cosell, sitting ringside with Joe Frazier, asked the ex-champ what he thought.

"Norton's gonna win," Frazier said. "He's fighting his fight."

Not only did Norton fulfill Frazier's prophesy, but he broke Ali's jaw in the process. The Ali legend of invincibility, dimmed by an earlier loss to Frazier, was shattered. The boy had a new comic book.

Despite that 12-round split decision victory, Norton was a 5-2 underdog in the rematch later that year on September 10. This time Ali won with a split-decision, but he fought a different fight — he kept away from Norton and refused to trade blows. Sticking and running.

Those sagacious individuals who establish odds on sporting events have again given Norton the underdog role in his title fight against George Foreman March 26. Understandable. The only times in history when the heavyweight king was rated an underdog was when Ingemar Johansson was 6-1 to lose to Floyd Patterson in their rematch in 1960 and when Primo Carnera was OK'd by Max Baer on June 14, 1934.

"I was the favorite in my first 31 fights," Norton said in an interview recently. "Maybe when I win the title from Foreman, they'll start making me the favorite again."

Maybe. But first he's gotta get by a big obstacle. Foreman. And that ain't gonna be easy. He's the same Foreman who destroyed the fighting maching Frazier in two rounds in Jamaica in January, 1973.

Those club-like punches that knocked Frazier everywhere but out of the country haven't lost much of their power over the past year. Norton, who underwent hypnosis because he was over-confident before the first Ali meeting, better revisit his doctor. It'll take more than hypnosis this time. That's what the odds say.

But although Foreman's probably going to win, there's always that uncertainty that follows a fighter like Norton into the ring. What's going to happen this time?

Will Norton pull off Upset No. 2 again? Another "lucky" punch? It's anybody's guess. But this time my quarter stays in my pocket. There's no second-guessing Norton. The odds are even you'll be wrong.

CRETE NETS TRACK WIN

. . . Cards Edge Syracuse, Plattsmouth

By STEVE GILLISPIE

Crete — Versital Doug Colvin received a good workout, but it was worth it.

The Cardinals' sprinter led his team here Tuesday night in Doane's Fuhrer Fieldhouse to win the third annual Doane-Crete indoor track meet.

Crete scored 29 points to edge out Syracuse, which finished with 27 points, while Plattsmouth was third with 25.

Nineteen of the 24 teams entered scored points in the 15-event meet.

Records were broken in seven events and tied in two others.

Colvin won the 176-yard dash, was fourth in the pole vault and led off Crete's victorious four lap relay team.

The Cardinals ran a 1:17.4 in the four-lap relay to better the old record of 1:18.8 set last year by Beatrice.

By winning the mile relay in the record time of 3:40.7, Plattsmouth kept Syracuse from tying Crete for the team title.

The host Cards and Syracuse were tied with 23 points each with two events left — the four-lap and mile relay.

Syracuse ran in a different heat of the mile relay than Plattsmouth did and finished second in time comparison to give Crete the team title.

One of the most impressive individual records to fall came in the shot put.

Sandy Creek's Jim Squires won the shot with a heave of 55-2 to topple the old meet record of 51-5¾ set by Fairbury's Gary Seacord in 1972.

Squires also had puts of 53-6½, 54-3½ twice and 54-6¾.

Other records were broken in the high jump, polevault long jump, and 60-high hurdles.

Records were tied in the 60-yard dash and 60 low hurdles.

Syracuse's Kim Fahrnstrom set the record in the high hurdles, although he was second in the finals and tied the mark in the low hurdles.

Fahrnstrom broke the meet record of 7.9 set by York's Gene Peters last year in the preliminaries and semifinals with a 7.8.

However in the finals Ansley's Mike Cherry beat Fahrnstrom to the tape as both went over the last hurdle even.

'Bolts' Kelley Hopeful For Third State Try

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer

Lincoln Pius X coach Don Kelley is hoping that the third time will be a charm.

Kelley is guiding the Thunderbolts into the Nebraska State Boys High School Basketball Tournament for the third time.

The first time Pius X appeared at the state tournament under Kelley's direction was 1970 and the 'Bolts were eliminated in the first game by eventual runner-up Laurel.

Last year Pius X defeated Gretna in the first round and lost to eventual champion Fairbury in the semifinals.

How would Kelley like to get to the finals this year? "It would really be nice, but we know it'll be a difficult task," he replies.

"All eight teams in each class are in a very elite group, accomplished a lot to get to state and anything can happen," he says.

Kelley will have a fairly experienced team that has seen state tournament action with four of its five starters playing last year.

Pat Anderson, Jim Hamersky, John Magsamen and Artie Aksamit are the foursome that played in the 1973 state tournament.

"Last year our qualifying for state was a little unexpected considering our record. But this year it was probably expected with our experience," Kelley notes.

"However, we can't see any difference this year except we probably have more self-confidence," he added.

Kelley says his team appreciated the rest between the district and state tournament. "The district was a tiring experience," he recalls as the 'Bolts played three games in three days.

"We had a little flue and we hope we can get over that before the state tournament," says Kelley.

Pius X had to beat Ashland, Plattsmouth and Nebraska City to earn a ticket to the state tournament. Plattsmouth was a contender for the ratings all season.

Nebraska City was ranked No. 10 and had its best season ever (17-4).

"It's a real honor to represent our district," Kelley says. "We feel we came from a real good district and the ball bounced right for us."

Kelley thinks the 'Bolts will have to play their best ball at the state tournament, but would especially like to see an improvement in one area.

"We shot pretty well from the field during the regular season, but that dropped off some at the district," he points out.

"We probably weren't as relaxed as we should have been or can be, but the flue may have something to do with that or we were probably tired from playing three games in three days," he reasons.

Kelley believes the Class B field is very balanced this year and has the highest respect for all teams.

"We're looking forward to playing, but we realize that all the teams are good and we're just going to be hopeful like the other clubs," Kelley says.

Padres Down Cubs For First Victory

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Padres snapped their baseball exhibition drought with three home runs and 14 base hits Tuesday en route to their first victory of the preseason—an 11-6 romp over the Chicago Cubs.

Bobby Tolan, Dave Roberts and Ivan Murrell unloaded homers for the Padres, who had scored just four runs in 30 previous innings. Tolan's three-run shot capped a four-run rally in the seventh inning and put San Diego ahead to stay.

Bill Grief was the winning pitcher and Paul Reuschel the loser.

In other exhibition action, Pittsburgh clubbed a Chicago White Sox split squad 9-5; Philadelphia buried Detroit 10-2; The New York Yankees blanked Kansas City 9-0; Boston beat the New York Mets 31; Texas trimmed Atlanta 7-3; Houston edged Minnesota 4-3; Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles 6-4; St. Louis shaded the rest of the White Sox split squad 2-1; Cleveland beat California 9-6; and Oakland topped San Francisco 8-5.

Home runs by Willie Stargell, Richie Zisk and Dave Augustine powered the Pirates past Chicago. Bill Melton and Luis Alvarado contributed two-run doubles for the White Sox.

Mike Schmidt drove in three runs with a single and triple, and Del Unser slammed a worun homer for the Phils. Norm Cash and John Knox doubled home the Tiger runs.

Ron Blomberg collected two hits and three runs-batted-in for the Yanks. Blomberg has now driven in 10 runs in 15 at-bats this spring. Sam McDowell, Bob Polinski, Ken Wright and Tom Buskey shared New York's four-hit shutout.

Rookie outfielder Dick Rice cracked three base hits in Boston's victory over the Mets. Mario Guerrero and Dick McAuliffe drove in a run each with base hits for the Red Sox.

Jim Bibby pitched four innings of two-hit ball to gain the victory for Texas. Rookie third baseman Roy Howell's run-scoring double highlighted a four-run Ranger uprising in the fourth.

Larry Milbourne scored Houston's winning run on a delayed double steal in the eighth inning. Cesar Cedeno and Milt May contributed two hits apiece for the Astros.

Junior Kennedy tripled in one run and scored another on a passed ball in the eighth as Cincinnati came up with four runs to beat the Dodgers. Ken McMullen and Andy Messersmith had run-scoring doubles for Los Angeles.

Jay Johnstone singled twice and scored both St. Louis runs, one on a double by Tom Heintzelman and the other on an error. Ron Santo singled in the lone Chicago run.

George Hendrick homered in Cleveland's victory over California. Dick Bosman was the winning pitcher.

Deron Johnson's home run helped Oakland over San Francisco with the teams getting 10 hits apiece. Reliever Bob Locker was the winner and Randy Moffitt the loser.

CCA Bid By Indiana Doubtful

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Indiana's 10th-rated Hoosiers, unhappy bridesmaids in the Big Ten Conference, remained doubtful participants Tuesday in the inaugural Collegiate Commissioners Association basketball tournament.

Indiana's assistant athletic director, Robert Dro, declined to comment on a report that the school's team members had voted not to accept a CCA bid following a 75-67 playoff loss Monday night to 12th-ranked Michigan, saying only that a decision would be announced later.

Indiana's fiery young coach, Bobby Knight, had previously labeled the CCA, which is designed primarily for major college conference runnersup, "a waste of time."

"My apologies to Wayne Duke (Big Ten commissioner)," the 34-year-old Knight said last month, "but I think the tournament in St. Louis is a waste of time.

"It's a personal thing with me," Knight said following his team's defeat. "I went to the NIT (National Invitation Tournament) when I was coaching at Army, and I have always liked the NIT.

"Those people have always been very good to me," he added. "If the CCA in any way was started to try and hurt the NIT, then it's wrong and I am opposed to it."

Knight, prior to the reported vote by the Hoosiers, said he wasn't certain "the kids have been asked if they want to go."

But Duke, in answer to Knight's remarks at the Champaign, Ill., Big Ten playoff site, stated, "The institution is committed to the CCA.

"The matter has been reviewed and I have the word of Bill Orwig (IU athletic director) that the school will play in the tournament," Duke said.

The CCA was devised last summer for teams from nine major conferences failing to win berths in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tourney.

Participants in the meet beginning Thursday night in addition to a Big Ten representative are Southern Cal, Pacific 8; Arizona Sate, Western Athletic; Southern Methodist, Southwest; Tennessee, Southeastern; Kansas State, Big Eight; Bradley, Missouri Valley, and Toledo, Mid-American.

Terps Unhappy With ACC

BALTIMORE (AP) — Athletic Director Jim Kehoe of Maryland agrees that the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament is unfair, but he's not ready to pull the Terps out of the league in a fit of pique.

Tom McMillen, who completed his collegiate career when Maryland lost a 103-100 overtime decision to North Carolina State in the ACC title game last Saturday, suggested in a published report Tuesday that the Terps quit the conference.

"There are just too many odds against a non-North Carolina team in this league," McMillen said of the seven-team ACC, which includes four schools from North Carolina. "We're just the outcasts. Just for once, I'd like to see the roles reversed."

The post-season ACC tournament, which decides the conference's representative in the NCAA playoffs, has always been held in North Carolina. This year it was at the Greensboro Coliseum.

"It's a fallacy to think that Greensboro is a neutral site," Kehoe said. "I don't condemn it, as such, but I've got to look at things from the Maryland viewpoint—and there's nothing objective about it.

"Tom is a young man with considerable intelligence, and he makes some excellent points. But immediately after losing a game like this is not the best time to put things in their proper perspective."

Kehoe said he has received numerous telephone calls and messages in the past few days, taking both sides of the conference question.

"I'm eager to hear everybody's opinion and be receptive to any comments," he said. "But there's more to this issue than one sport, or one contest. It involves a total philosophy or commitment, and has to be viewed in that context.

"I've changed a lot of things since I've been here. My only guideline is to do what's best for the University of Maryland and its athletic program. But this is not the time to resolve the matter."

Kehoe said his proposal to assign outside officials to the ACC basketball tournament was rejected at the league's winter meeting. He also has suggested that the tournament be rotated.

The tournament will be played in Greensboro again next year, but at the next league meeting bids will be considered for the 1975 tournament from arenas in Charlotte and Greensboro, N.C., Richmond, Va. and Landover, Md.

In 21 years, only Maryland in 1958 and South Carolina in 1971 have broken the North Carolina stranglehold on the ACC basketball championships.

"For three years," said McMillen, a Rhodes Scholar, "I've seen what it is to go down there and have the whole world against you. It's not basketball anymore. The mental strain is tremendous. You can't relax."

McMillen conceded that his remarks might be interpreted as "sour grapes," at this point, but he added: "Isn't it time we got realistic about the whole situation?"

Renovated Cubs Set Sights On NL Pennant

Scottsdale, Ariz. (UPI) — Ron Santo isn't here. Neither are Fergy Jenkins, Glenn Beckert and Randy Hundley. In some ways, it doesn't look like a Chicago Cub training camp.

But it is and it's different in other ways. For instance, instead of a camp with a set ball club and a flock of youngsters shooting for maybe one or two openings, many jobs are wide open.

"We haven't had this kind of competition around here in a long, long time," says manager Whitey Lockman, who stood by and watched his Cubs, the old ones, waste away a big early-season lead last year and wind up fifth in the National League East.

Because of the keen competition for jobs this spring there is a lot of enthusiasm and hustle here. No one is walking around feeling he has a job locked up, not even such other old standbys as Rick Monday, Don Kessinger, Jose Cardenal and Billy Williams.

"Even I'm on the spot, sort of," says Williams, who is making the switch from the outfield to first base. "It would be better for the club if I played first. If for some reason I can't then there will be a hole somewhere."

Strengths: Williams, of course, no matter where he plays, plus a probable outfield of Cardenal in right, Monday in center and Morales in left field. Also, new catcher George Mitterwald, a starting pitching staff of Burt Hooton (14-17), Rick Rueschel (14-15) and Milt Pappas (7-12), and relievers Horacio Pina and Dave LaRoche.

Weaknesses: Questionable pitching after the first three plus a lack of solid reserves. Then, there is no telling if Vic Harris and Bill Madlock, who came over from the Texas Ranger in the Jenkins trade, will hit enough to hold down regular infield jobs. If they fail, Lockman and the Cubs will be in trouble because the infield reserves aren't much.

There are holes in the outfield, too, after the first three, which means Williams may have to go back to left and veteran Jim Hickman or Gonzales Marquez will take over at first if there is a breakdown.

New Faces: Harris, who hit .249 for Texas, Madlock, who batted .351 in only 21 games with the Rangers, Mitterwald, who hit .259 with 16 homers and 64 RBIs at Minnesota, Morales, a .281 hitter as a part-timer with San Diego, and a flock of young pitchers from the farm system.

Outlook: Lockman says the Cubs will be a more interesting team in 1974 because of added speed both in the infield and outfield as well as on the bases. "We'll run a lot more and play more hit and run then in the past," he addes.

The National League East has the best balance in baseball and while the Pittsburgh Pirates look like the favorites going in, any one of the six clubs could win the title. Put the new Cubs down for third below the Pirates and Mets.

Cowhide Balls

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — You couldn't blame the players for beefing about the new cowhide baseball.

One of the cowhide balls, which will replace horsehide when the regular season opens, was tried out Tuesday during the Boston Red Sox-New York Mets exhibition game.

In the third inning, Boston's Juan Beniquez hit a grounder to Bud Harrelson. When the Mets' shortstop threw the ball to first, it came apart at the seams.

"It looked like a butterfly," said Mets first baseman Ed Kranepool. "I thought it would never get here."

Legislature Advances Sunday Racing Bill

The legislature, without debate, gave first round approval Tuesday afternoon to a bill which would allow horse racing on Sunday.

The vote to send South Sioux City Sen. John Murphy's LB692 over its first floor hurdle was 25-15.

The measure was previously considered on March 4 but failed to advance. Murphy asked Tuesday that the bill be considered again and it gained enough support to be sent on its way.

NWU Double Loss To E. Texas Baptist

Marshall, Tex. — Nebraska Wesleyan's baseball team suffered a double defeat at the hands of East Texas Baptist College here Tuesday, 3-2 and 9-1.

In the first game, Scott Votava hit his first home run of the season. WSU tied the game in the top of the 7th inning on a single by Al Lessman, but the Texans came back in the bottom of the inning to win on a single by Dick Bunton.

Both freshman pitchers, Klaus for NWU and McHargue for the Texans received their initiation into college baseball in the second game as they struggled with their control. Bob Blake was two for four in the game while Jim Doeka was two for two, but the East Texas team slammed eight hits and scored nine runs to overpower the Plainsmen.

Bruins Elevated To Second

By The Associated Press

UCLA will open its bid for an eighth straight NCAA championship Thursday night as the nation's second-ranked basketball team.

And the Bruins' opponent will be No. 20 Dayton, the team that helped UCLA become runnerup to North Carolina State in the latest Associated Press major-college poll released today.

Dayton became No. 20, replacing Oral Roberts in the poll, by upsetting Notre Dame 97-82 and dropping the Fighting Irish to third place.

North Carolina State, which won the Atlantic Coast Conference Championship with a 103-100 overtime victory over Maryland last Saturday, remained No. 1 with 24 first-place votes and 792 points. The Wolfpack will take a 25-1 record, best of the 20 ranked teams, in the NCAA East playoffs against No. 5 Providence, 23-3.

UCLA, 23-3 after winning the Pacific-8 with a lopsided victory over No. 15 Southern California, received the other 17 first-place votes and 748 points. Dayton, 20-7, cracked the rankings with 23 points.

Notre Dame received 652 points. The Irish will play in the NCAA Mideast against No. 12 Michigan, which won the Big Ten title in a playoff against 10th-ranked Indiana Monday night. Only games through last Saturday counted in the poll.

Maryland finished its season with a 23-5 mark and fourth-place in the rankings, with two polls yet to be held. Maryland turned down a bid from the National Invitation Tournament.

Two Husker Matmen To NCAA

A pair of youthful Nebraska wrestlers will be in Ames, Iowa, this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, competing in the 44th annual NCAA wrestling championships at Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum.

Despite the fact that 177-pound Bill Hoffman is only a freshman and 190-pound Bob Johnson is a sophomore, Husker head coach Orval Borgialli says both could do well.

"Johnson has an excellent possibility of placing," Borgialli says. "I don't know if he'll be seeded, but I feel he should be since he beat last year's runner-up, Johnny Johnson of Northern Illinois, 3-0, in the Oklahoma City Open.

"Hoffman pinned two kids in the Big Eight meet and if he goes in with that kind of attitude that he's going to stick people, he'll be okay," the Husker mentor continues.

Johnson, a native of Gordon, Neb., had a sterling 23-7 record in 1973-74, while Hoffman, out of Atlantic, Iowa, posted a respectable first-year mark of 11-14. Both wrestlers placed third in the Big Eight meet two weeks ago to qualify for the NCAA meet.

"Iowa walked away with the Big Ten title and they beat Iowa State (the defending champion) bad in a dual," the Husker coach explains. "They've got good overall balance and they'll be in front of a home crowd."

But how about the Big Eight teams that have won 38 of 43 championships, including the last six in a row and 19 of the last 20?

"Oklahoma State has an outside chance, but I don't know if they have enough people who can make it to the finals," Borgialli says. "Iowa State has won it the last two years, but I don't think they have enough horses this time. This may be the sixth time somebody outside the Big Eight wins it."

The last team oustide the Big Eight to win the national championship was Michigan State in 1967 and the last one before that was Penn State in 1953.

Solons Keep Hunting Bill

By Associated Press

The legislature refused Tuesday to reconsider its action Monday in passing a bill permitting the road ditch hunting of game birds and animals.

Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner's motion to reconsider railed on a 15-25 vote.

The bill, LB779, sponsored by Sen. Irving Wiltse of Falls City, had earned 30-14 approval on final reading.

Warner said he would like the bill at least to be amended to exclude Lancaster County, in which Warner resides.

Warner drew some support from Sen. Tom Kennedy of Newman Grove, who said "I have not had one farmer agree this is a good bill."

Warner's reconsideration motion was favored 21-17 but needed 25 approving votes.

District AAU Site Changed

The site for Saturday's District AAU Jr. Olympic Wrestling Tournament has been changed from Lincoln High to Lincoln East, according to meet officials.

NU Rifle Club To Host Match

The National Rifle Association Collegiate Smallbore Rifle Sectional Match will be hosted by the UNL Rifle Club on March 15, 16 and 17 at the Military and Naval Science Building on the UNL campus.

Results of the competition will be submitted to NRA headquarters in Washington, D.C. to determine national ranking for teams and individuals.

Robert Boomer of the Husker Rifle Club placed 26th out of 995 competitors in 1973's match.

Employes At Lincoln General Express Fear Of Harrassment

By H. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

There is continued fear of harrassment among Lincoln General Hospital employes interested in forming a labor union, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes were told Monday night in a Lincoln meeting.

AFSCME international representative Don Elrod of Grand Island and Lincoln, and Mary Combs of Omaha, state organizing committee director for the union, fielded questions from about 50 Lincoln General employes at a meeting called by a committee trying to organize a union of hospital employes.

AFSCME has 20 locals in Nebraska including Lincoln, Omaha, Douglas County, and state Departments of Roads and Labor. Lincoln General is a city-owned hospital.

Elrod told the group that other city employes under AFSCME contracts have the right to discuss union matters on city property as long as it's on the employe's time and in a "non-working area."

"If an employe feels he's being harrassed, make a note of it immediately and bring it to us," Elrod said.

Only 16 states in the United States allow public employes to organize, Mary Combs said. Nebraska is one of them, she said.

AFSCME State Political Chairman Vic Meyer told committee member and nurse Karen Garrisson, she said, that 22% of the Lincoln General hospital's 650 employes have signed cards declaring their desire for a union election.

The State Court of Industrial Relations must have signatures from 30% of the employes in order to declare an election.

Employes expressed anger over the appearance in the hospital of Bill Christopher of St. Louis who they said spoke to them against labor unions. Christopher is a management consultant for Lincoln General.

Said one: "We shoiuld have been told who this man was. We thought he was a union representative."

Elrod said he had met last week with Lincoln General administrator Robert Brungard to "lay the groundrules" on what union and management could do in this period before a possible election.

He said Brungard told him he could not make any commitments until he consulted with the hospital attorney Norman Krivosha who he said was out of town.

"But we need official clarification on these groundrules," Elrod said.

Miss Garrison complained that small turnouts at meetings like Tuesday night's was because her committee had no way to tell hospital employes about them. They are not allowed to advertise the meetings on employe bulletin boards in the hospital, she said.

The committee will distribute handbills announcing a meeting scheduled for next Thursday as employes come to and go from work. The meeting is to include elections of temporary officers to organize employes interested in establishing a union.

Record Crowd Opens Agriculture Exposition

Omaha (AP) — A record crowd of 18,630 turned out Tuesday for the opening of the seventh annual 1974 Triumph of Agriculture Exposition. The total was about 300 above first-day attendance last year.

More than 200 U.S. manufacturers and distributors had displays at the two-day show.

Nebraska Gov. J. J. Exon opened the show, flanked by Kathy Votaw of Wellfleet, Neb., who is Miss American Angus, and Sandra Ash of Arcadia, the Nebraska Charolais Queen.

Hundreds of pieces of equipment were on display but representatives of few firms could offer farmers immediate delivery.

Marv Van Deursen, manager of the Des Moines, Iowa, plant of Koehring Farm Division of Appleton, Wis., said "we're all sold out for spring delivery."

He said his firm had been "in a back order position for nine months with a major problem in the delivery of component parts."

Larry Marsh, salesman for the Owatonna Manufacturing Co. Inc. of Owatonna, Minn., said "I'm going to have to learn selling all over again if this demand situation turns around."

Strike To End

Addis Ababa (UPI) — The national trade unions have agreed to end a four-day nationwide strike after winning the most sweeping labor reforms in modern Ethoiopian history, a top union official said.

An 18-year-old Japanese hijacker, his head wrapped in cloth, is brought down the steps from a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet by policemen disguised as airline personnel shortly after his arrest Tuesday at Naha, Okinawa. Police identified him as Katsuhito Owaki, who said he hijacked the jet carrying 425 persons so he could afford to go to college.

First National Shareholders Told 1973 A Successful Year

Shareholders of First National Lincoln Corp., the one-bank holding company that owns all of the stock of First National Bank & Trust Company of Lincoln, were told at the annual shareholders' meeting Tuesday that 1973 was a successful operating year.

Consolidated net income was $3,041,000 in 1973, the equivalent of $5.14 per share. Comparable figures in 1972 were $2,666,000 and $4.54 per share.

Deposits at year end were $286,030,000, an increase of more than $37,000,000 over the total on Dec. 31, 1972. Loans outstanding Dec. 31, 1973, were $189,690,000 as compared to $158,940,000 a year earlier.

Brazil's Influence Slowly Grows

©The New York Times

By H. J. MAIDENBERG

Montevideo — When Simon Bolivar struggled to liberate the Spanish colonies in South America, the great liberator dreamed of two nations on the continent. He never imagined that the Spanish and Portuguese halves of South America could ever be united.

Today, however, unification of the continent is being effected by the gradual expansion of Brazilian political and economic influence over the Spanish-speaking half of South America.

Whether South Americans term the expansion "the new imperialism" or "a natural manifest destiny," it is most pronounced in Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia, three of Brazil's smaller neighbors. And recently the shadow of the "green giant" has been hovering over Chile, too.

Argentina Isolated

One important side effect of Brazil's growing influence has been the isolation of Argentina, her chief rival for supremacy on the continent. By removing Argentina's influence from their neighbors, Brazil has sharply reduced her status as a power in South America — both politically and, more important, economically.

Brazil fired no shots and massed no troops on the frontier. Her gains of recent years were achieved through diplomacy, trade pacts and the wise use of money.

Paraguay was Brazil's first success. Paraguay, a wretchedly poor nation of 2.5 million people, was offered credits, her military rulers were courted and her major export, cattle, was given a good reception.

In exchange, Brazilians have been permitted to buy vast tracts of Paraguayan land, make other important investments and open Paraguay's markets to Brazilian products.

Today many young Paraguese are working in increasing numbers for Brazilian farmers and industrialists. The Brazilian cruzeiro is becoming a power in Paraguay.

Last year the promise of more cruzeiros led Paraguay's government to grant Brazil rights over major rivers for the construction of massive hydroelectric power systems. Brazil needs more electric power for her booming industry.

Complaints

The Argentines complained bitterly about the diversion of the benefit of those rivers from their territory. But they felt they could not protest too loudly because Brazilians are becoming the important customers of Argentine commerce.

Bolivia is another triumph for the Brazilian foreign ministry. By winning over key military men, the Brazilians helped install Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez as president of Bolivia in 1971.

When Banzer tried to sell more of his country's oil and natural gas to Argentina rather than Brazil a few months ago, he was almost toppled from power. His fate was widely discussed in Brazilian and Argentine newspapers at the time. But Brazil's surging economy needs the oil and gas, and the outcome was never in doubt.

Open Conflict

Bolivian politics is now an arena for open conflict between military leaders who are either pro-Brazil or anti-Brazil.

Those who favor closer ties to Brazil cite the economic benefits that result from the commercial investments pouring into Bolivia from her neighbor.

Those who oppose becoming "Brazil's 23rd state" want their country to remain fully independent. They believe Bolivia is potentially rich in minerals that should be used for her needed development.

Few people in South America have any doubt about which side is going to prevail.

Uruguay is a prime example of Brazilian expansionism. Uruguay, after years as a beacon of democracy but as an economic laggard, was taken over last June by her military men in the Brazilian manner. Labor unions, the press and democratic processes have since been scrapped or repressed.

Uruguay Easier

With half the population of Bolivia's 5.5 million, Uruguay was an easier mark than Bolivia. Today Brazilian investors are busily buying up land in Uruguay and dominating her commerce.

Nationalists in all three countries — Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia — are lamenting that their long-awaited economic boom comes at a time when their people are losing control over their patrimony.

Last September's rightist revolution in Chile, another former democratic bastion in South America, opened that country to Brazilian political and economic penetration.

Brazil allegedly financed the revolutionaries in large part and is now pouring credits and exports into Chile.

All these successes have led many people in South America to speculate on Brazil's next target. As for the 102 million Brazilians, many view their country's expansion as logical and of benefit to their backward neighbors.

Cash, Not Welfare

Average Tax Refund Is Up $16, IRS Says

Washington (AP) — The average federal income tax refund is up slightly this year, indicating that President Nixon's tax case hasn't spawned widespread cheating, Internal Revenue Service chief Donald Alexander says.

"We think the taxpayers are cooperating very well this year with their responsibilities and they'll continue to do so," Alexander said.

The average refund on some 34.6 million returns filed by March 1 was $366, up from $350 at the same time a year ago, an IRS spokesman said.

In an interview with the National Public Affairs Center for Television for a program to be aired Wednesday night, Alexander said the increase in the refund is just about what the IRS had predicted.

About two million more returns have been filed as of March 1 over the same period last year, he said.

Although they were reluctant to acknowledge it publicly, officials of the agency are reported to be concerned about taxpayer reaction to the controversy over Nixon's tax case.

But Alexander, when asked directly if he believed Nixon's tax deductions would undermine cooperation and honesty in paying taxes, said:

"We don't think it will — we don't think it has on the signs we have thus far."

Alexander also said that IRS field agents have not surveyed public attitudes on Nixon's tax returns. "I know of no such surveys on public attitudes with respect to the returns of any taxpayer," he said.

"I think that people are going to meet their obligation because I think in the first place they believe in our system and they believe in our tax system," he said.

"I think secondly that they believe, as they should, that we do have a fair and an even-handed and an effective system of tax administration."

At another point, Alexander said he has not been under any political pressure and added that in the "unlikely event that political pressure were exerted on me, I would refuse to follow any such pressure."

Alexander said the Senate-House Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation found the IRS wasn't abused in the Watergate case and that "it wasn't used to harass enemies or reward friends. . . ."
